

Is NZ actually 'broke'? No. We're rich

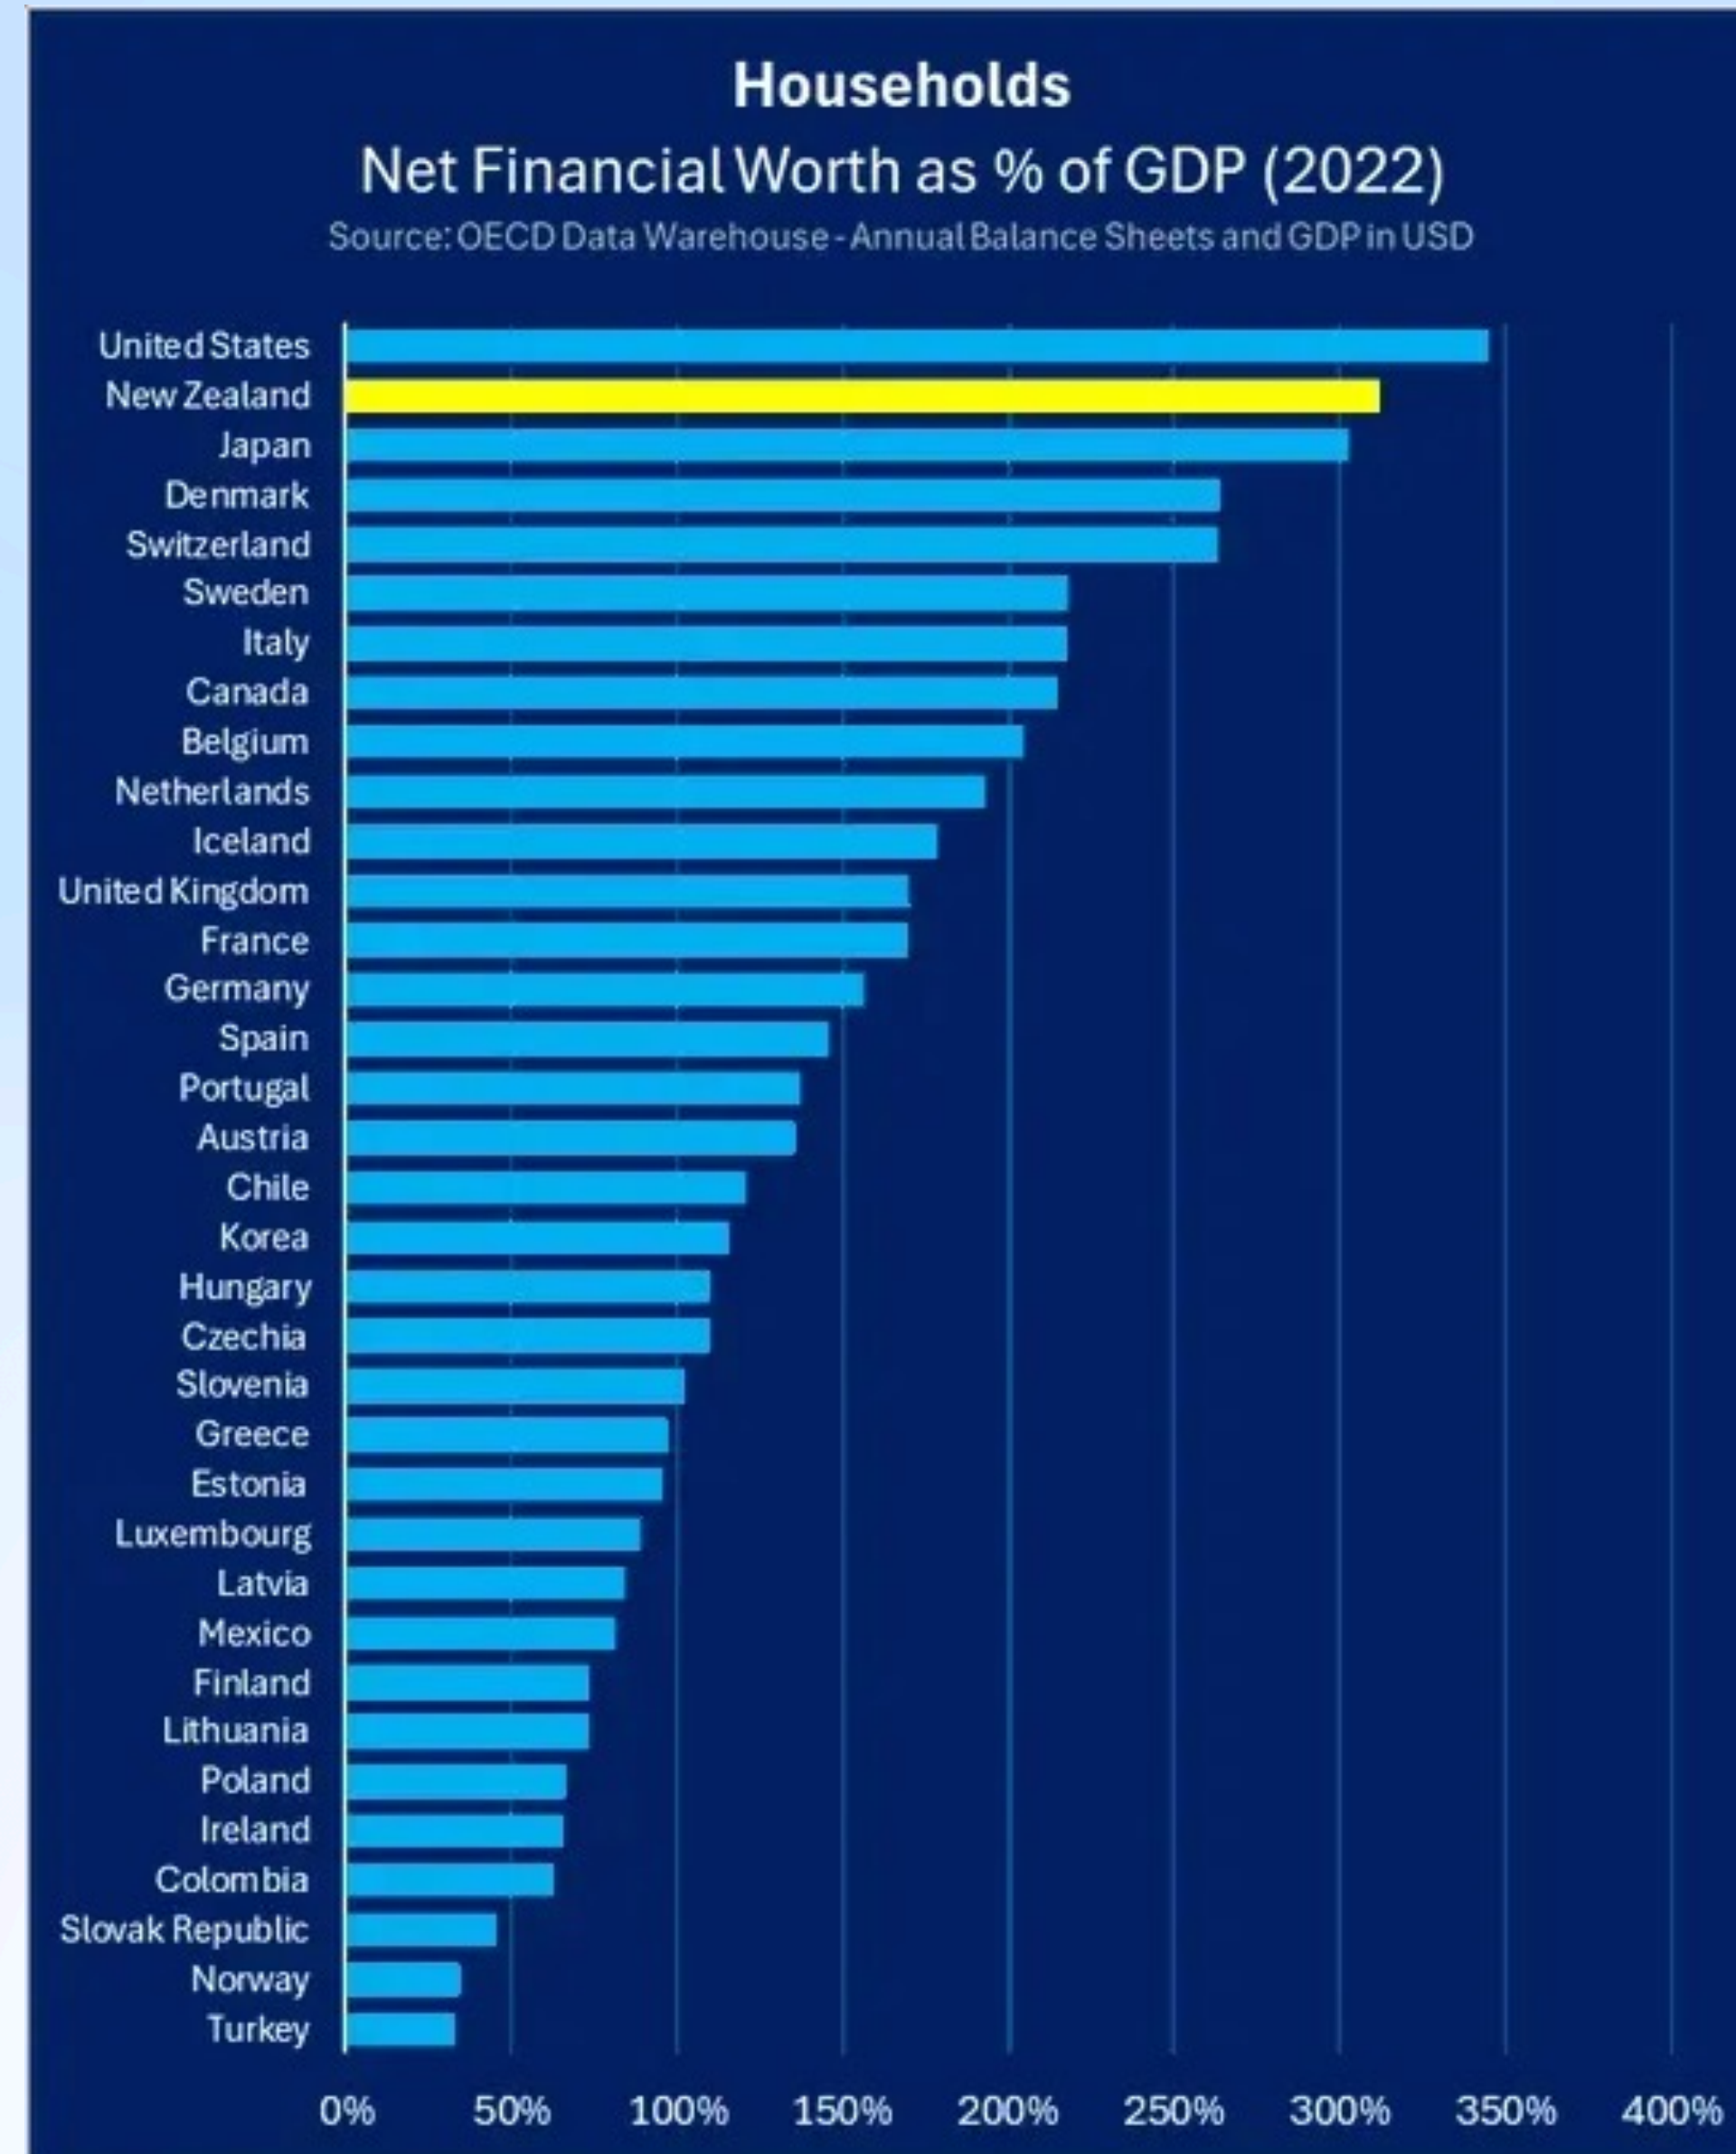

Govt interest costs less than 2% of income

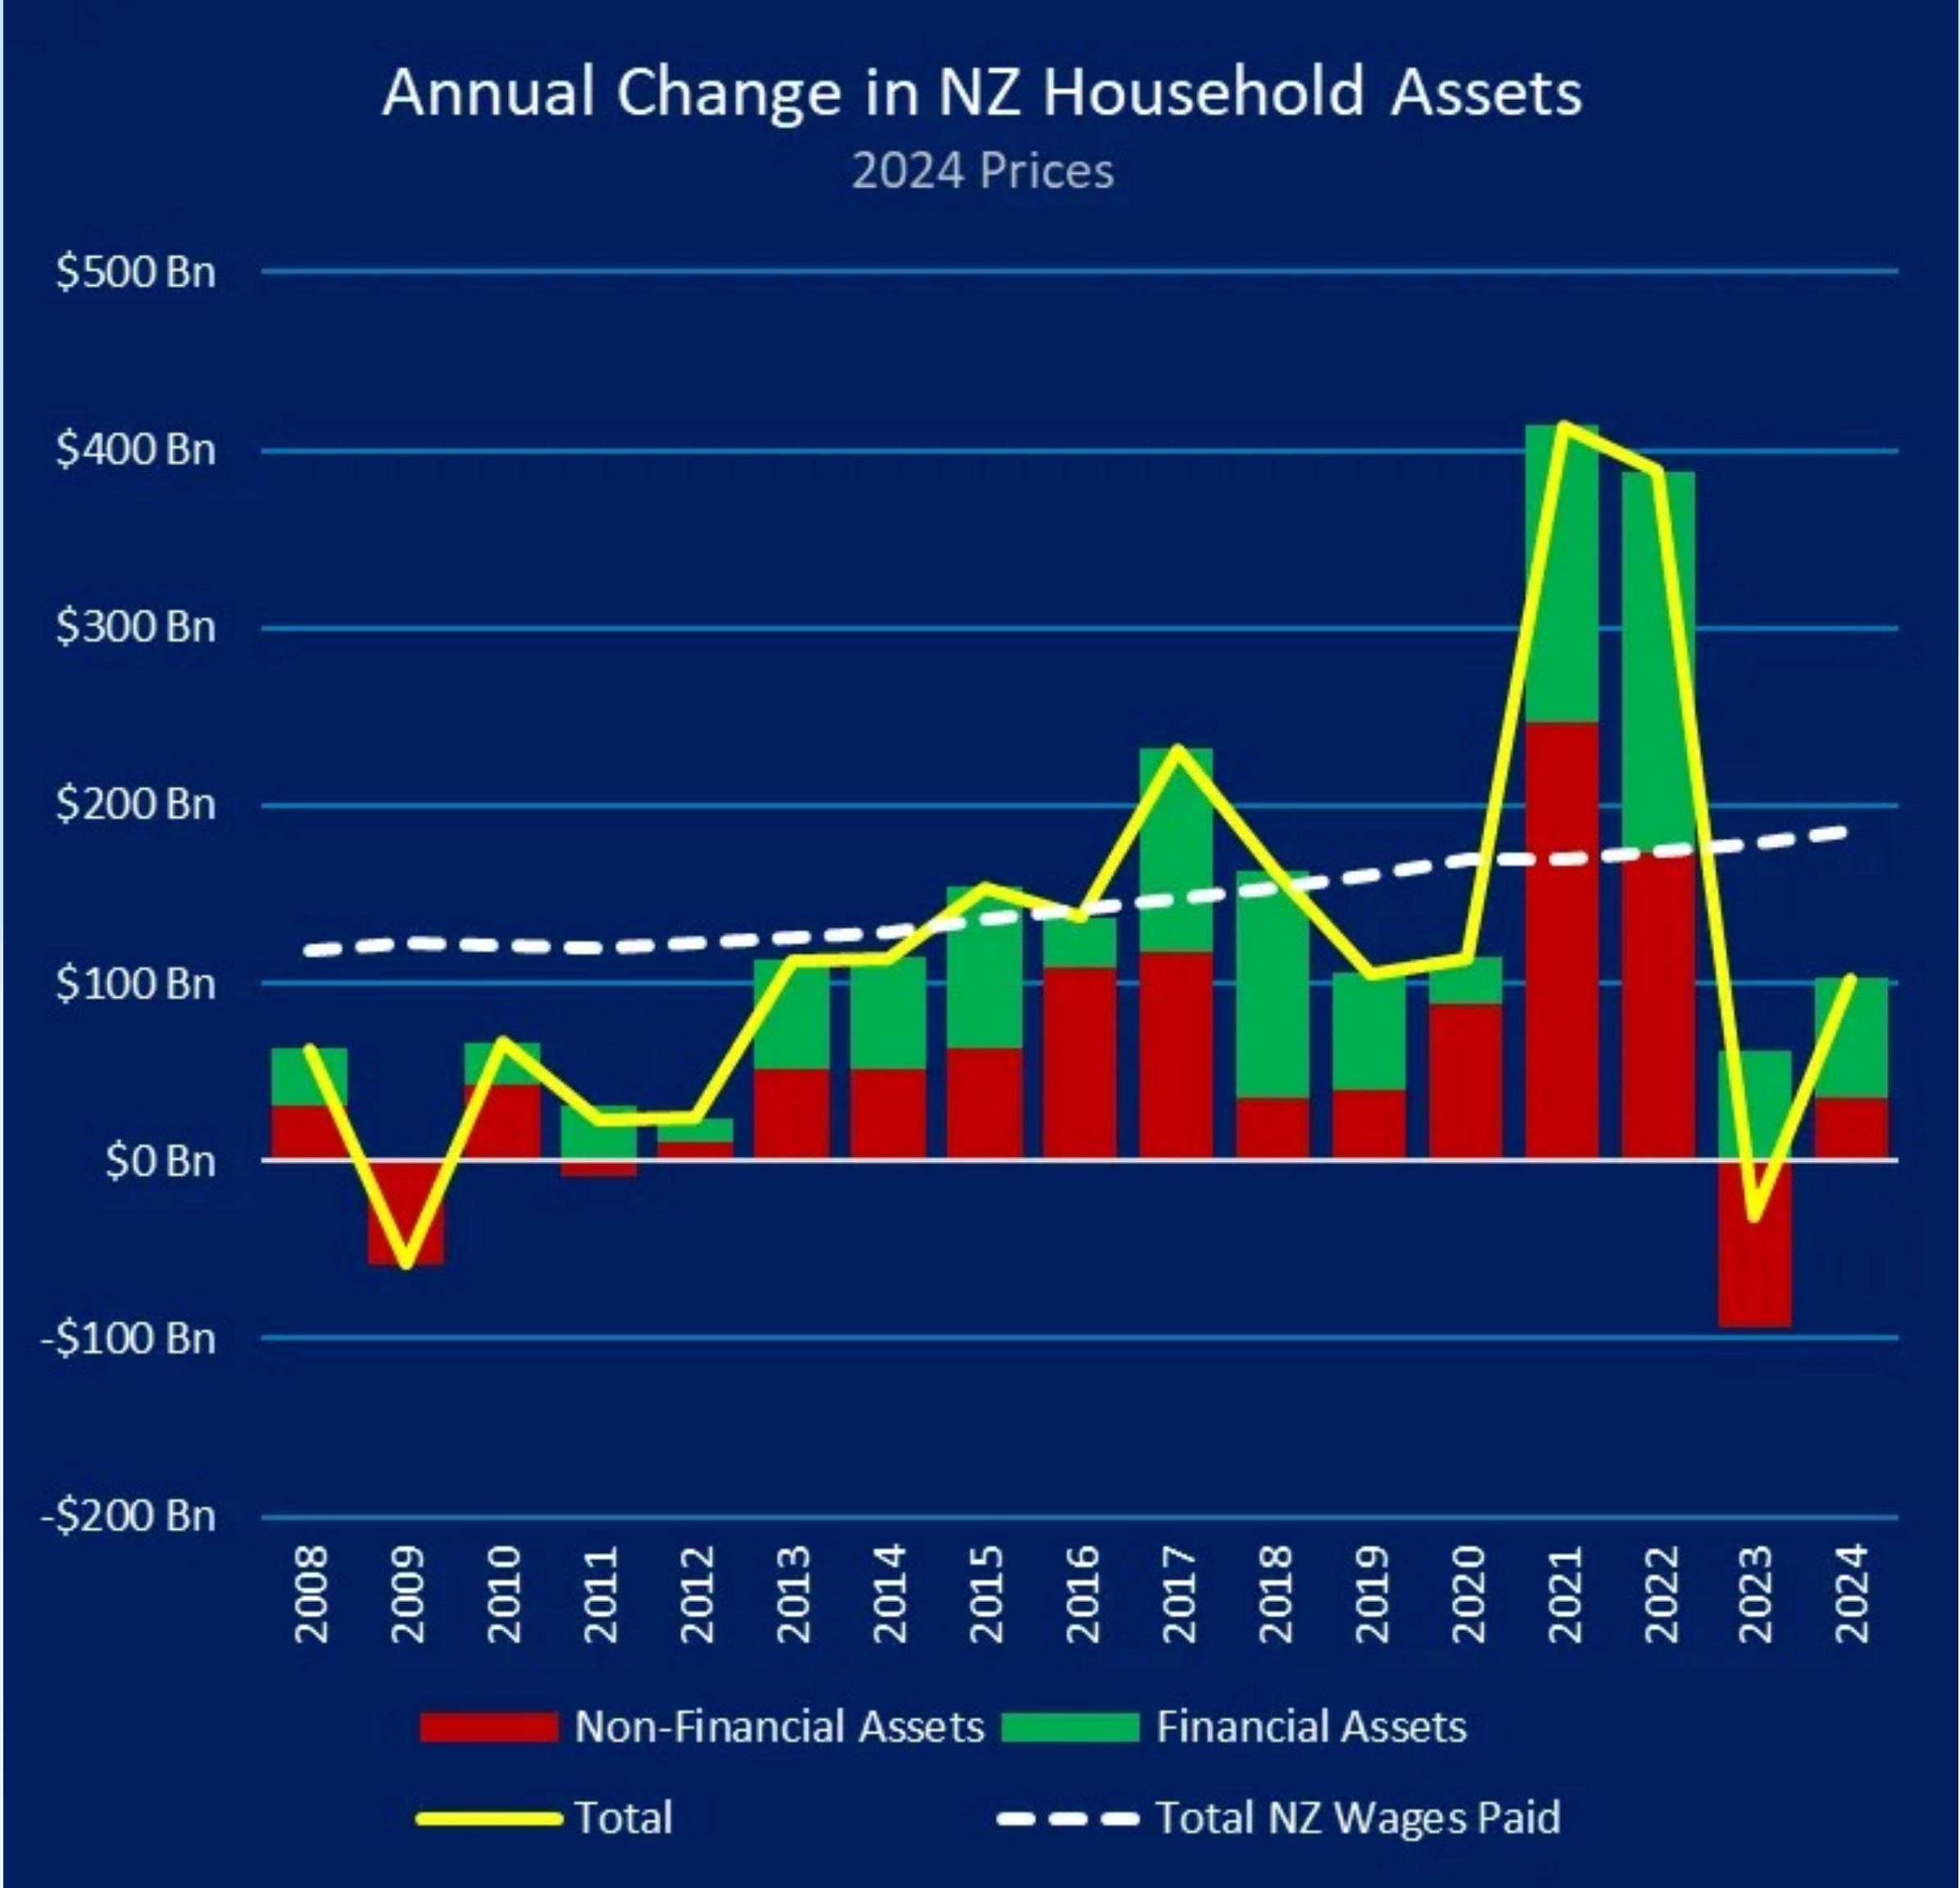

Households & Rest of World rich. Govt is too. 'Firms' aren't.

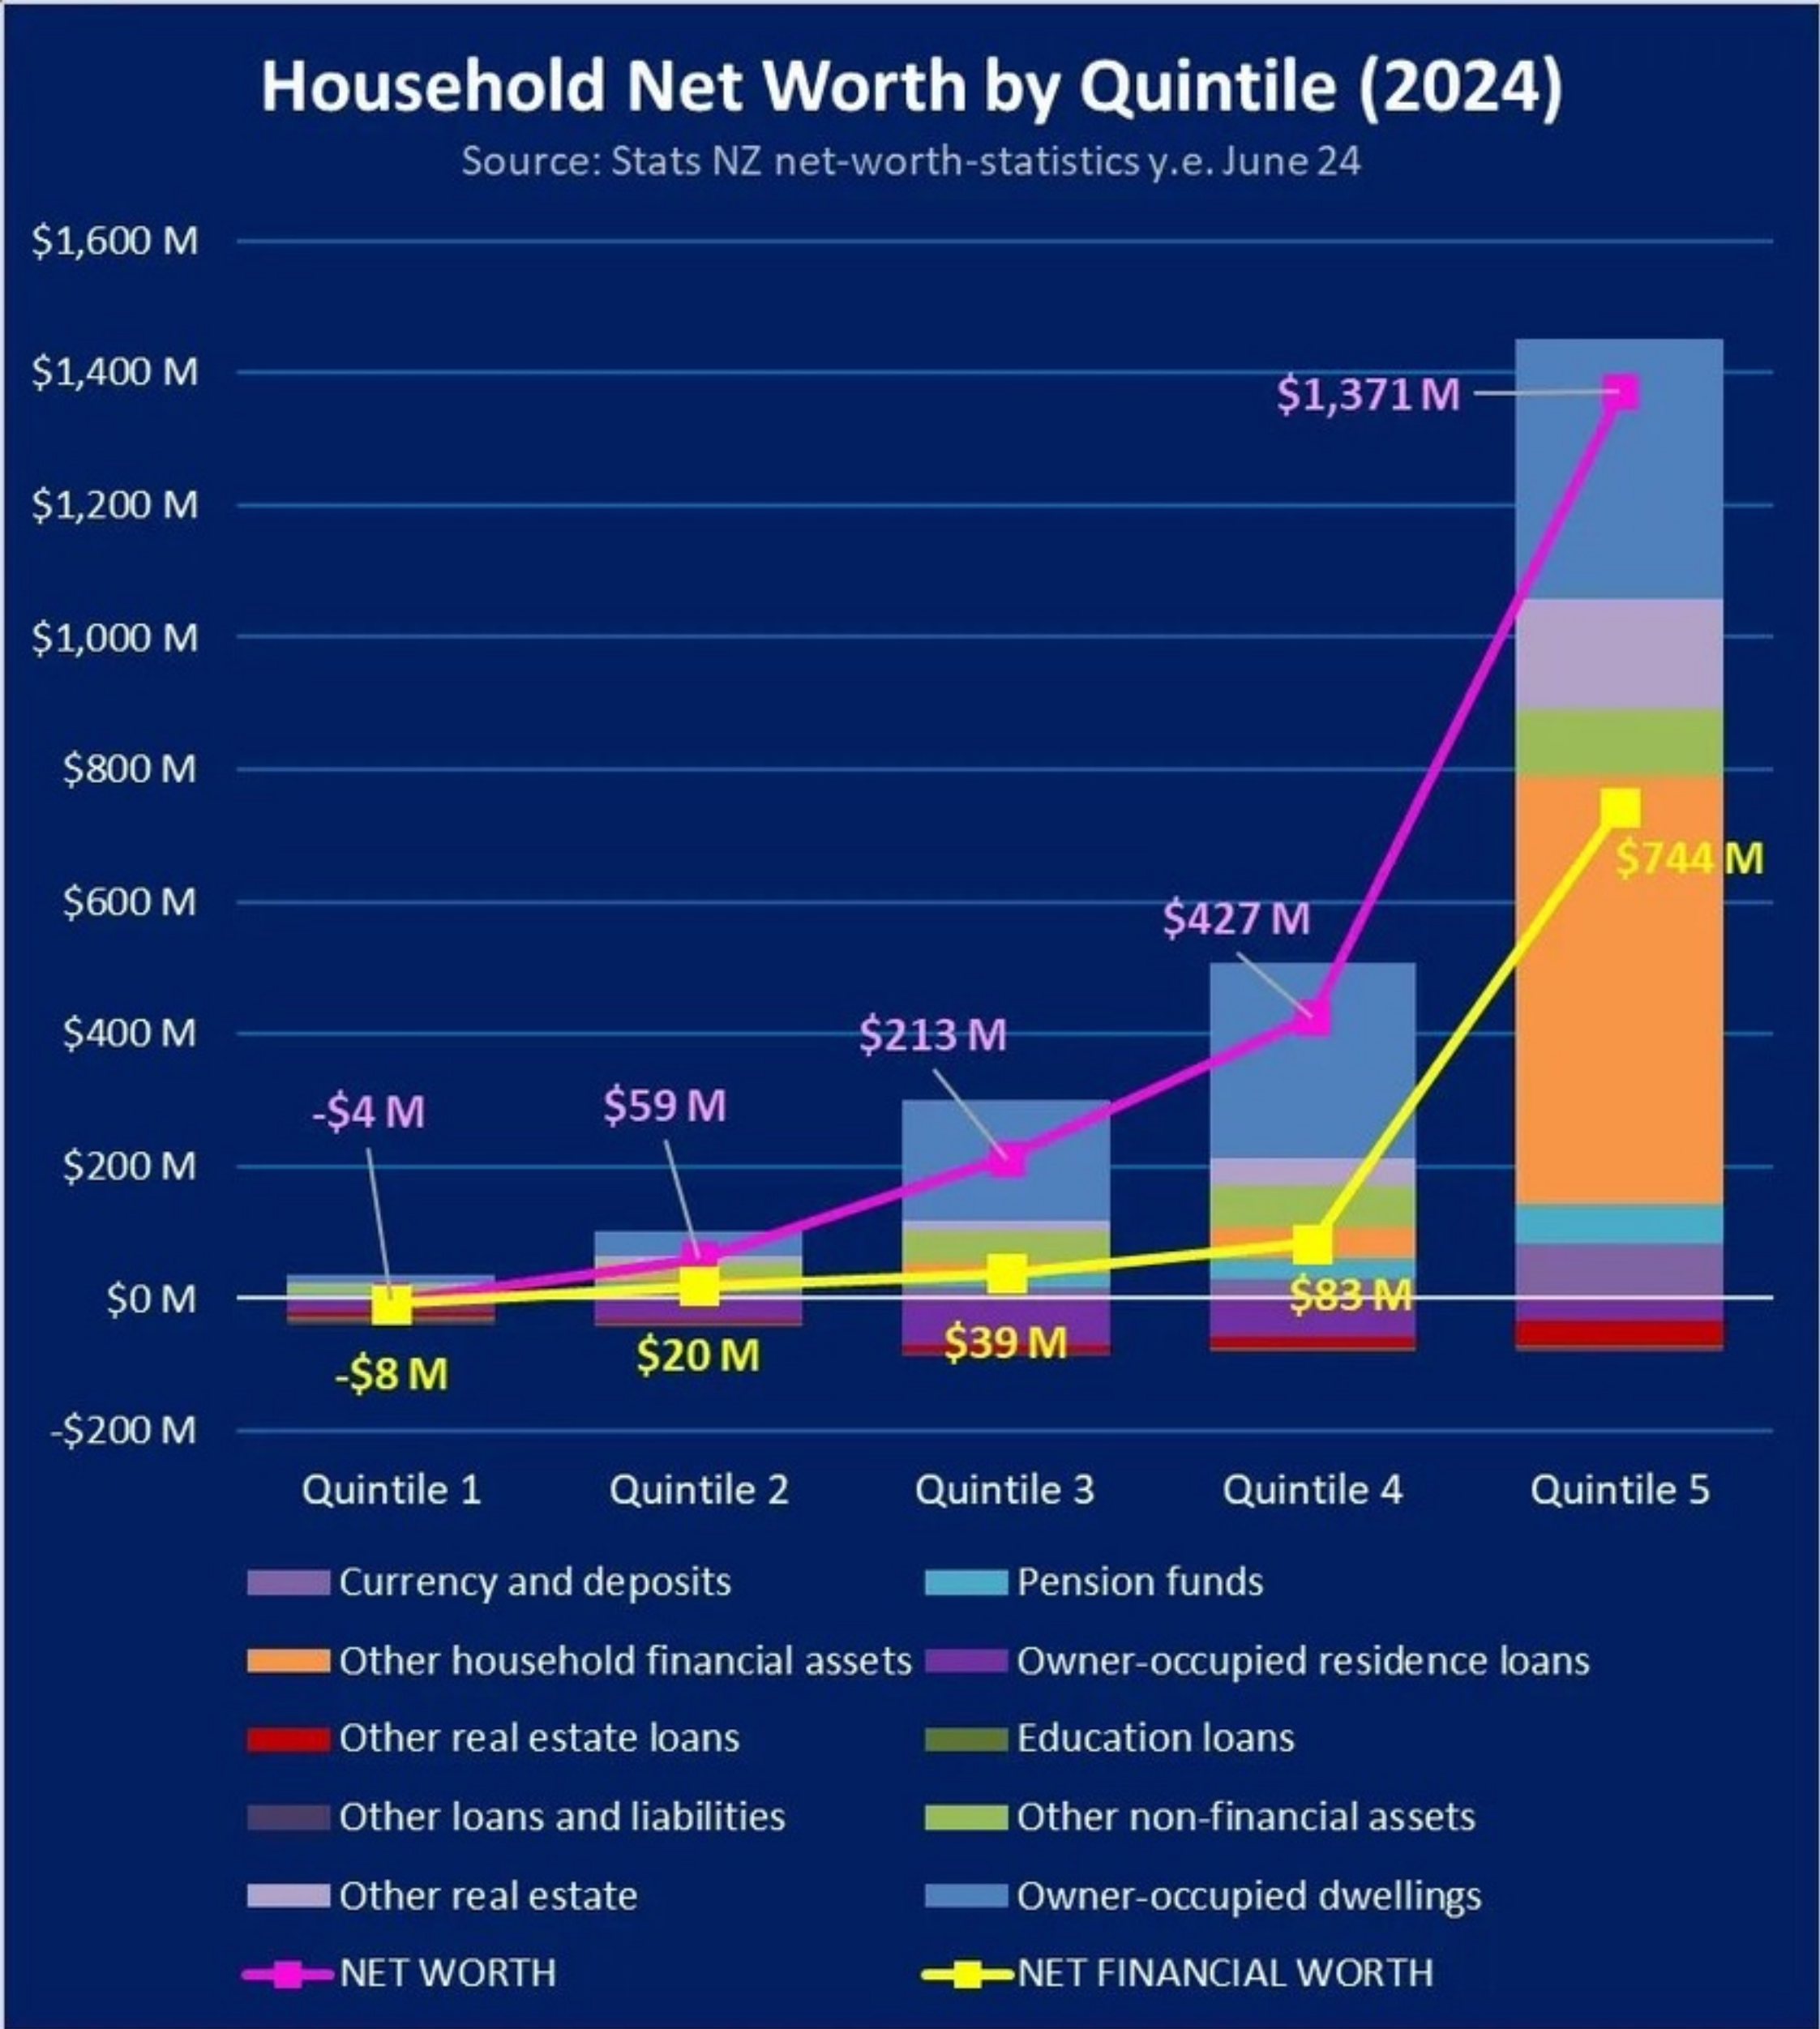

Some households are rich. So, so rich.

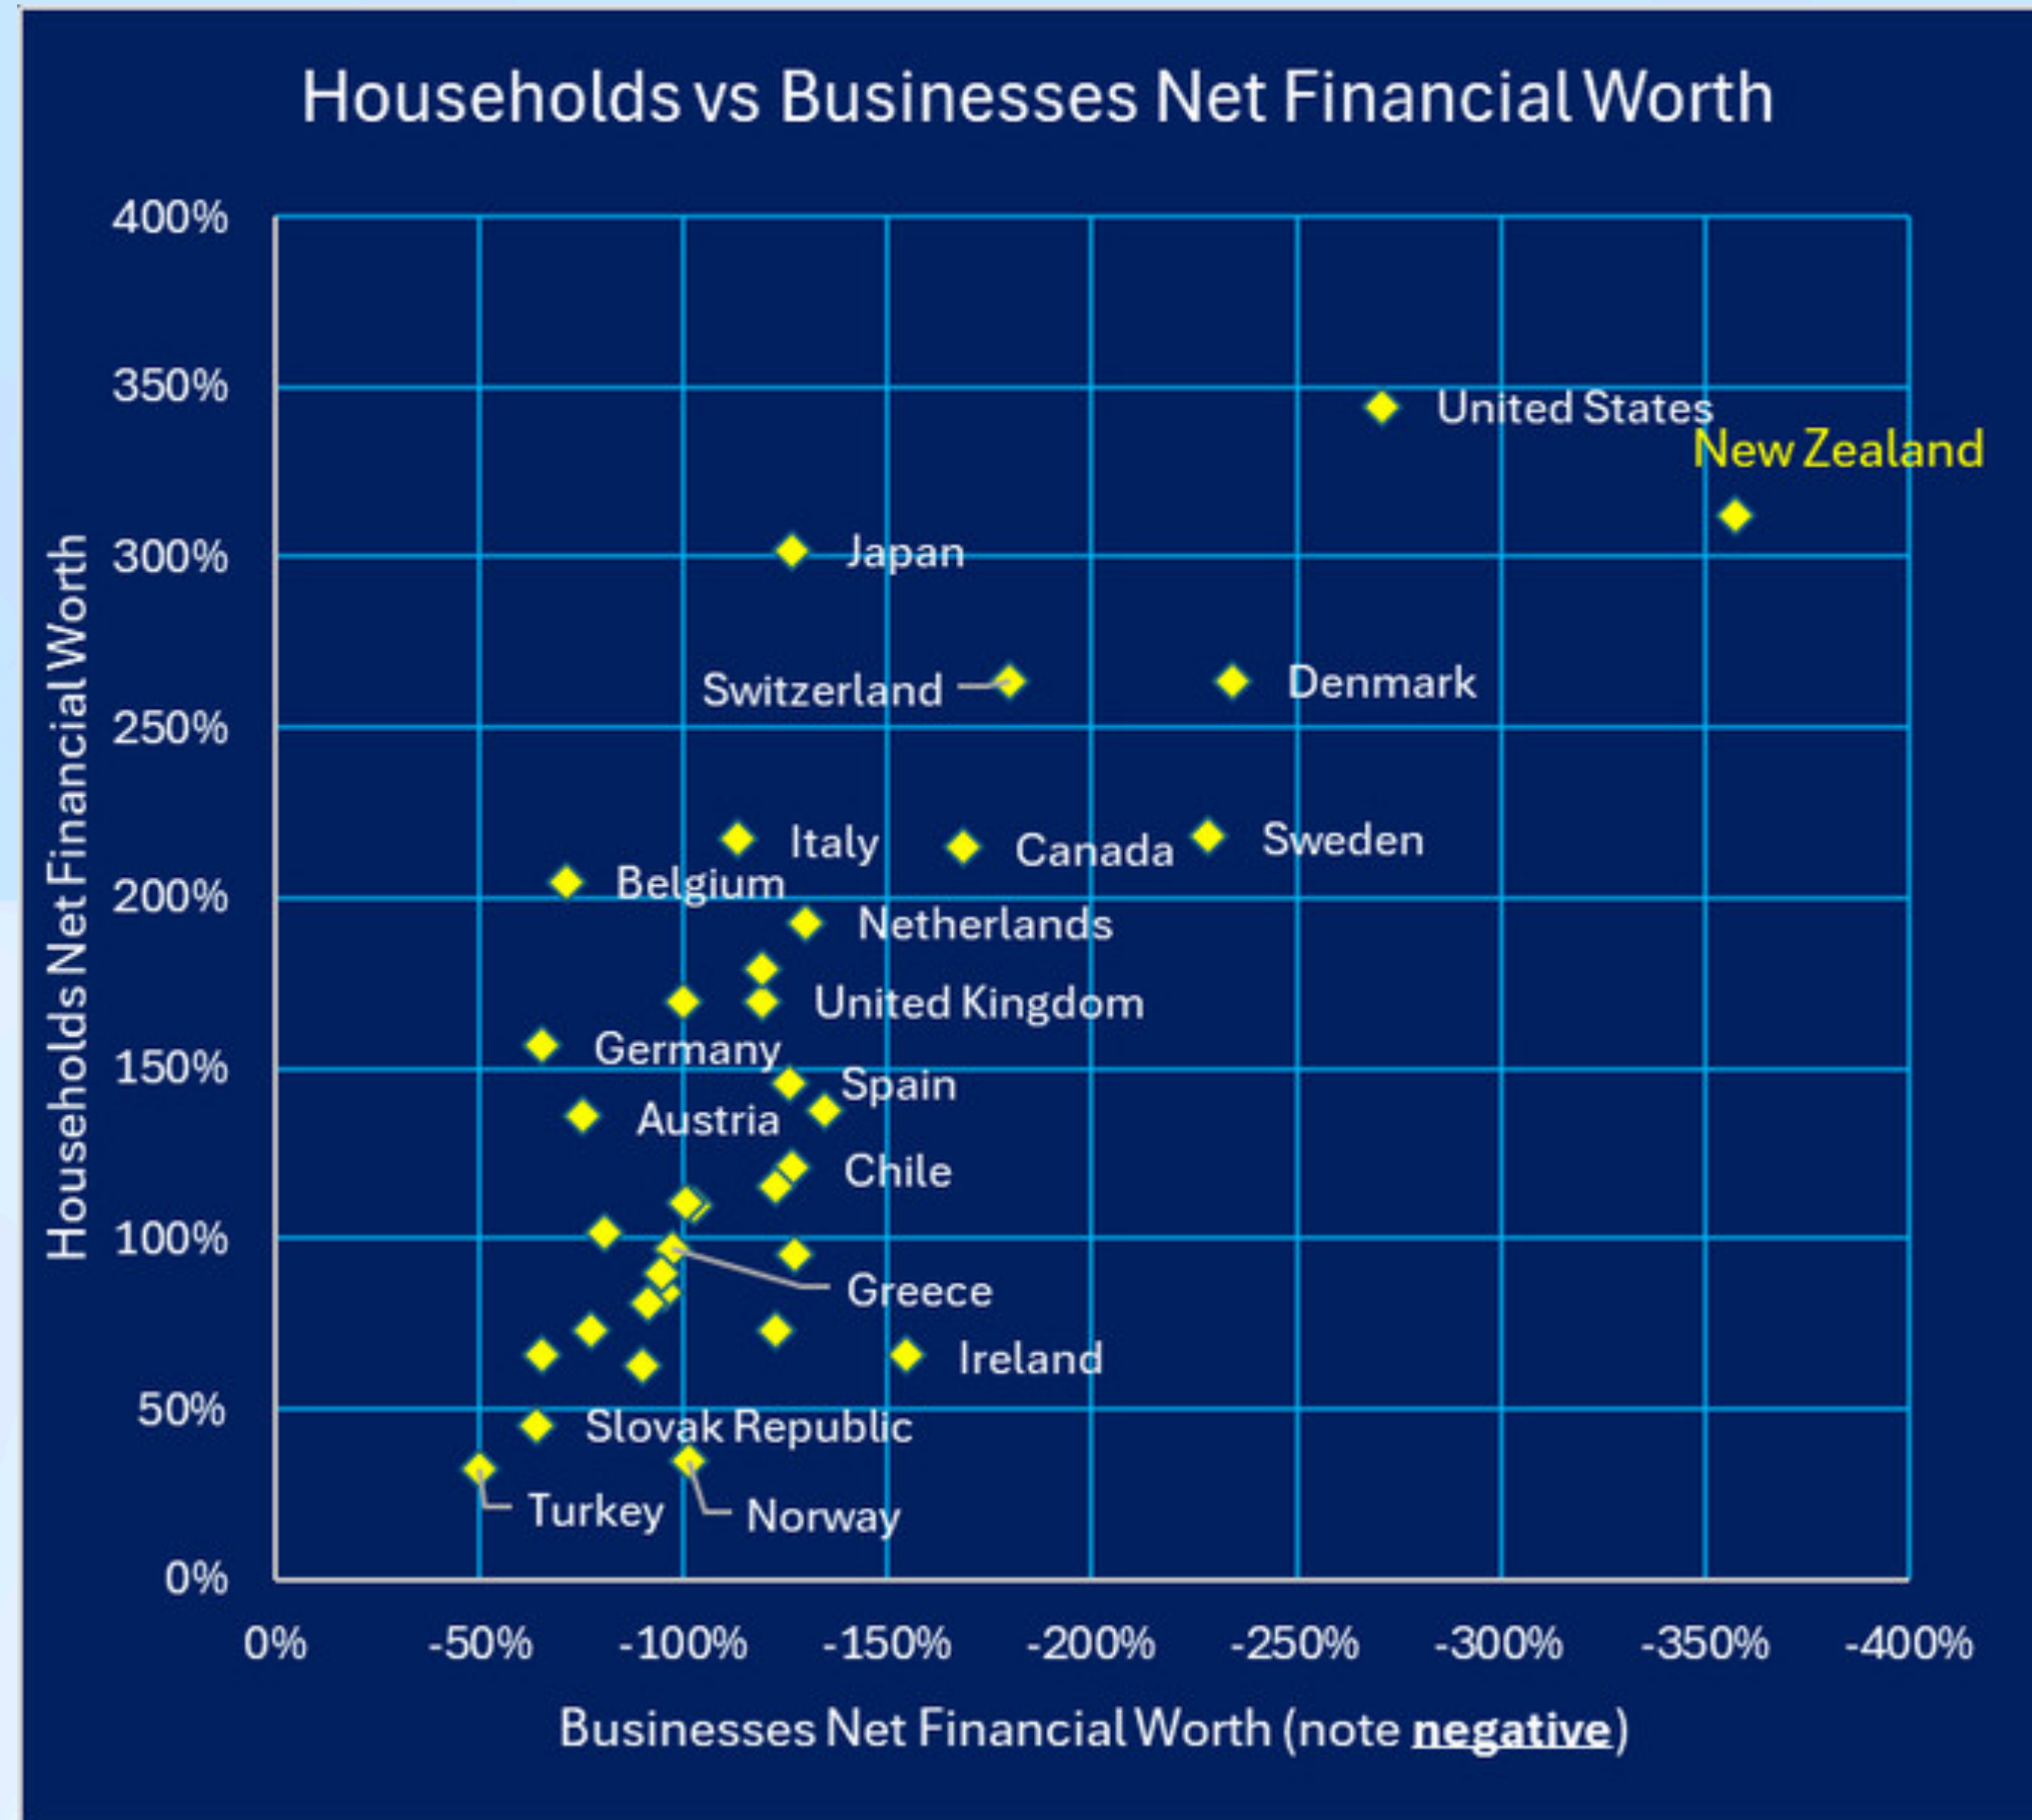

How did that happen? Land & stock values rose

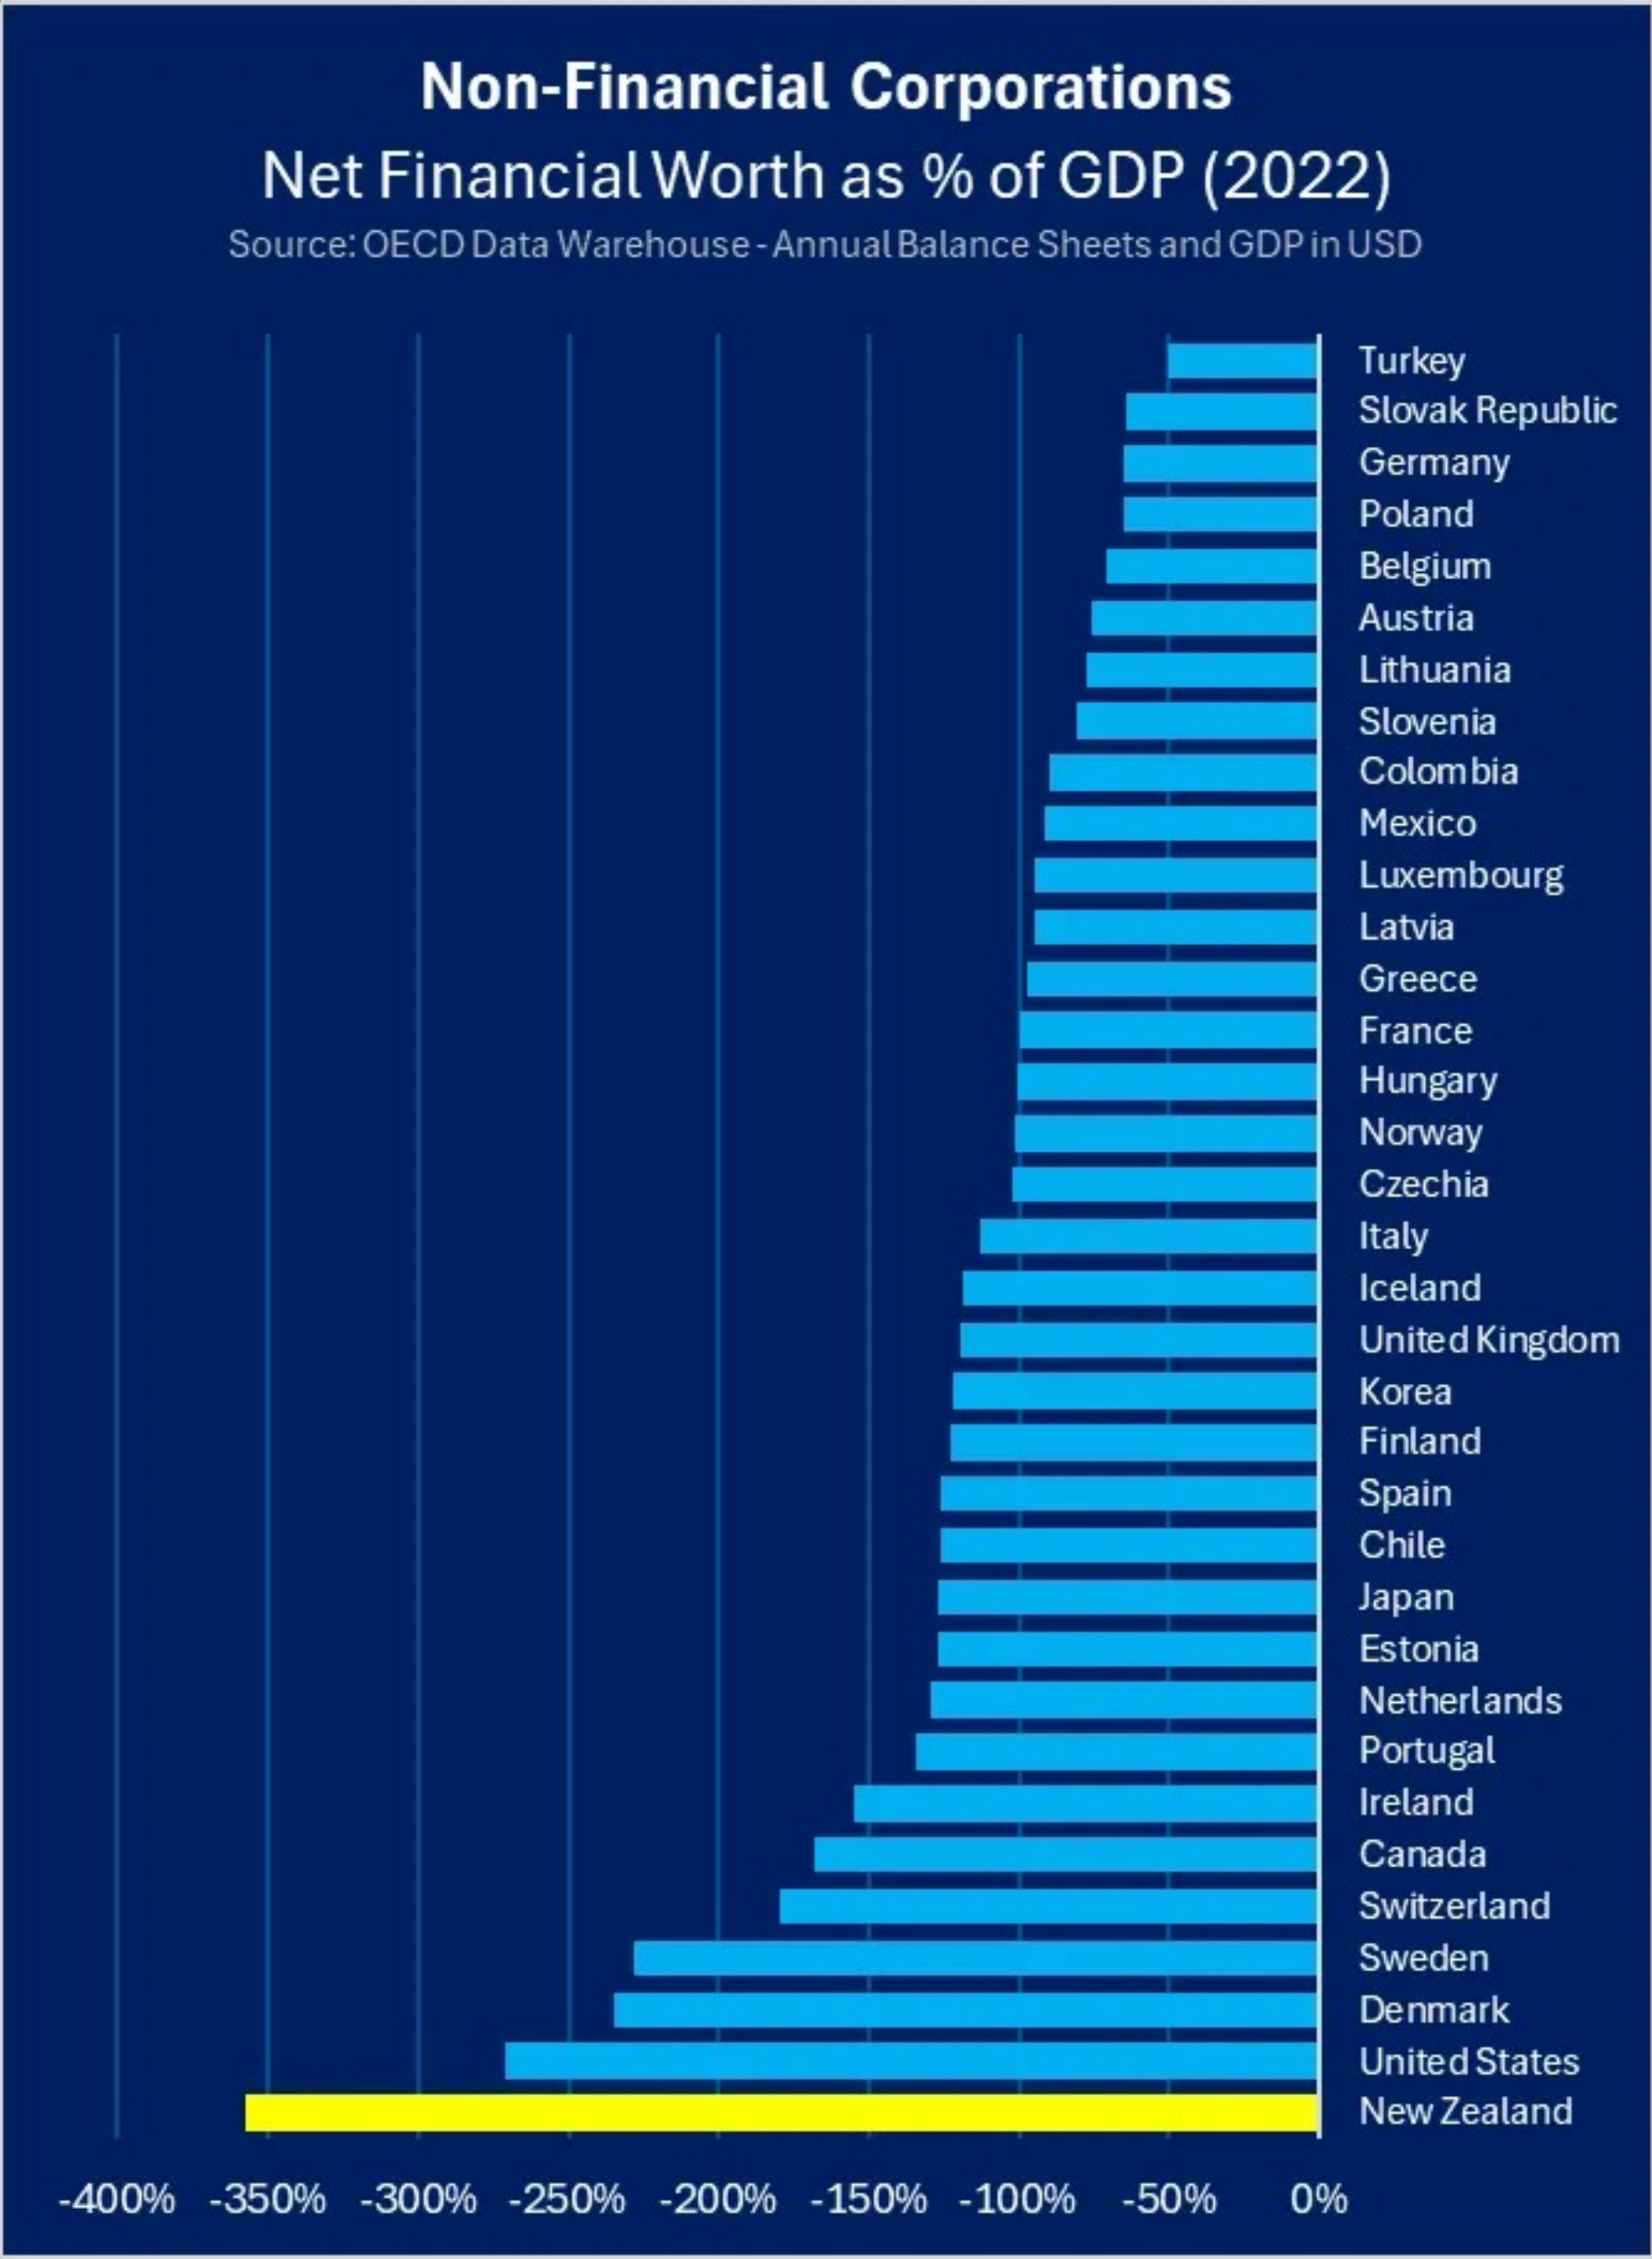

Some households are really, really rich. Some are poor.

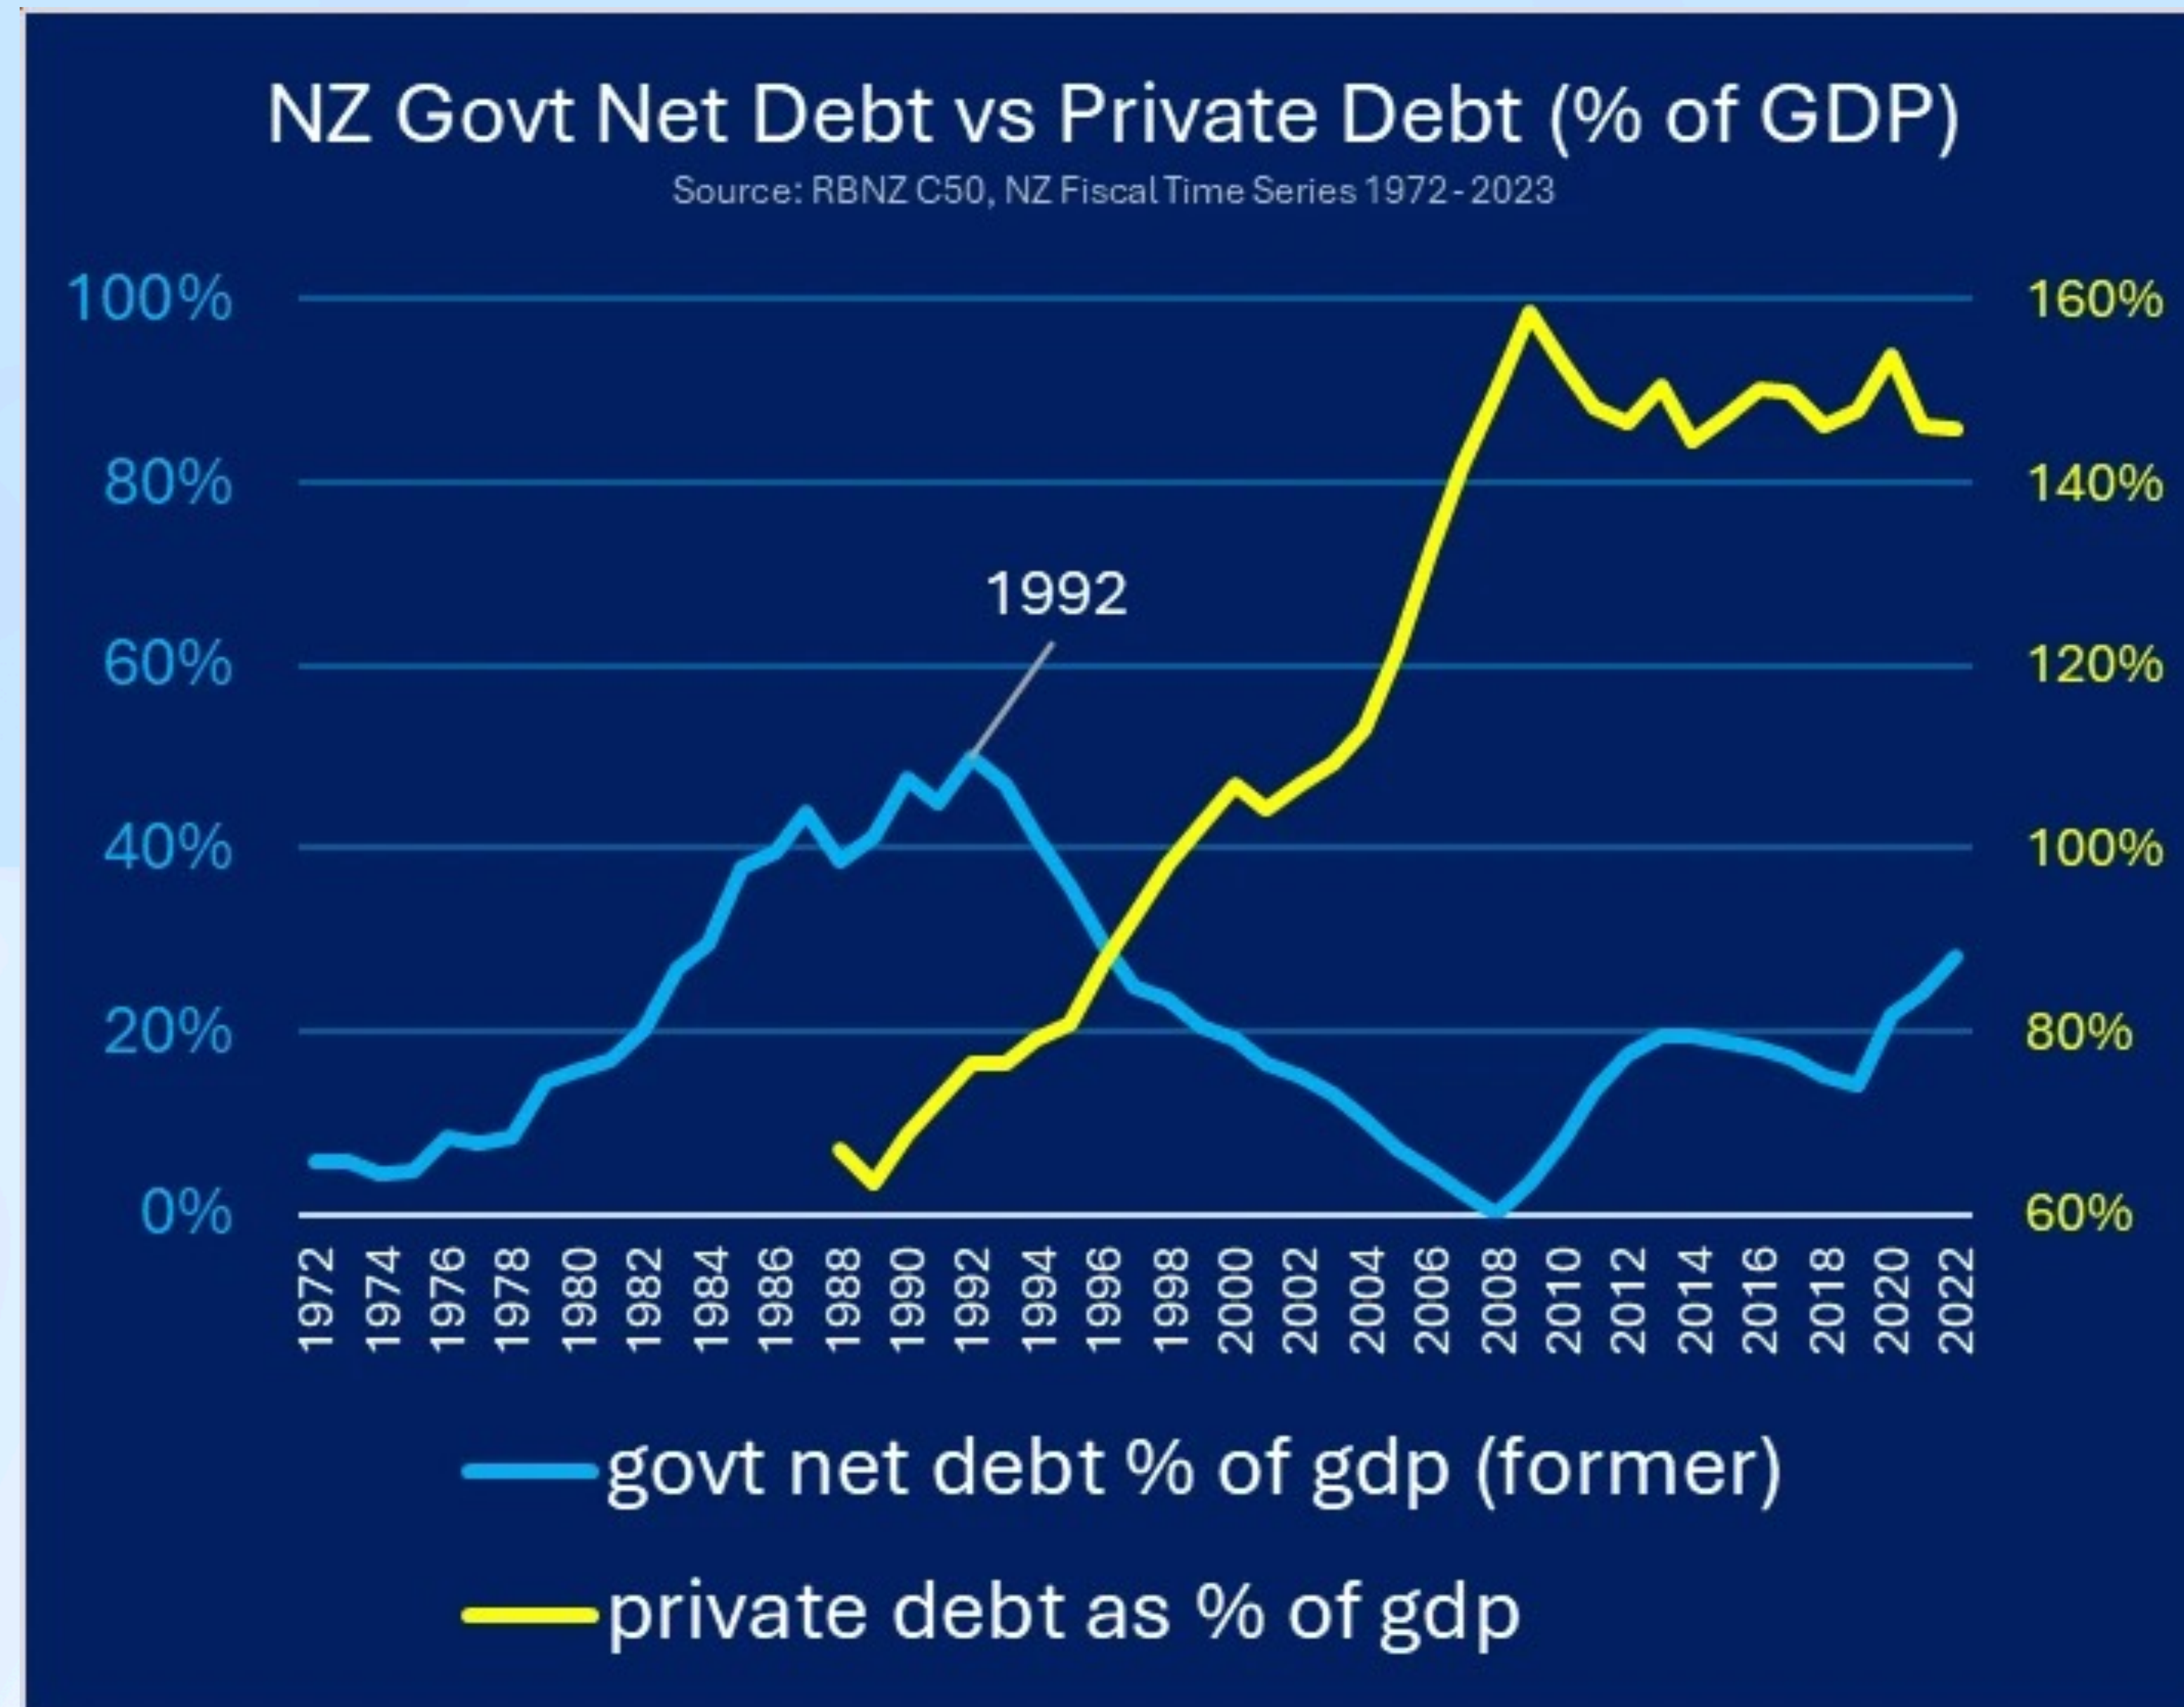

So who is 'broke' then? Landlords are indebted.

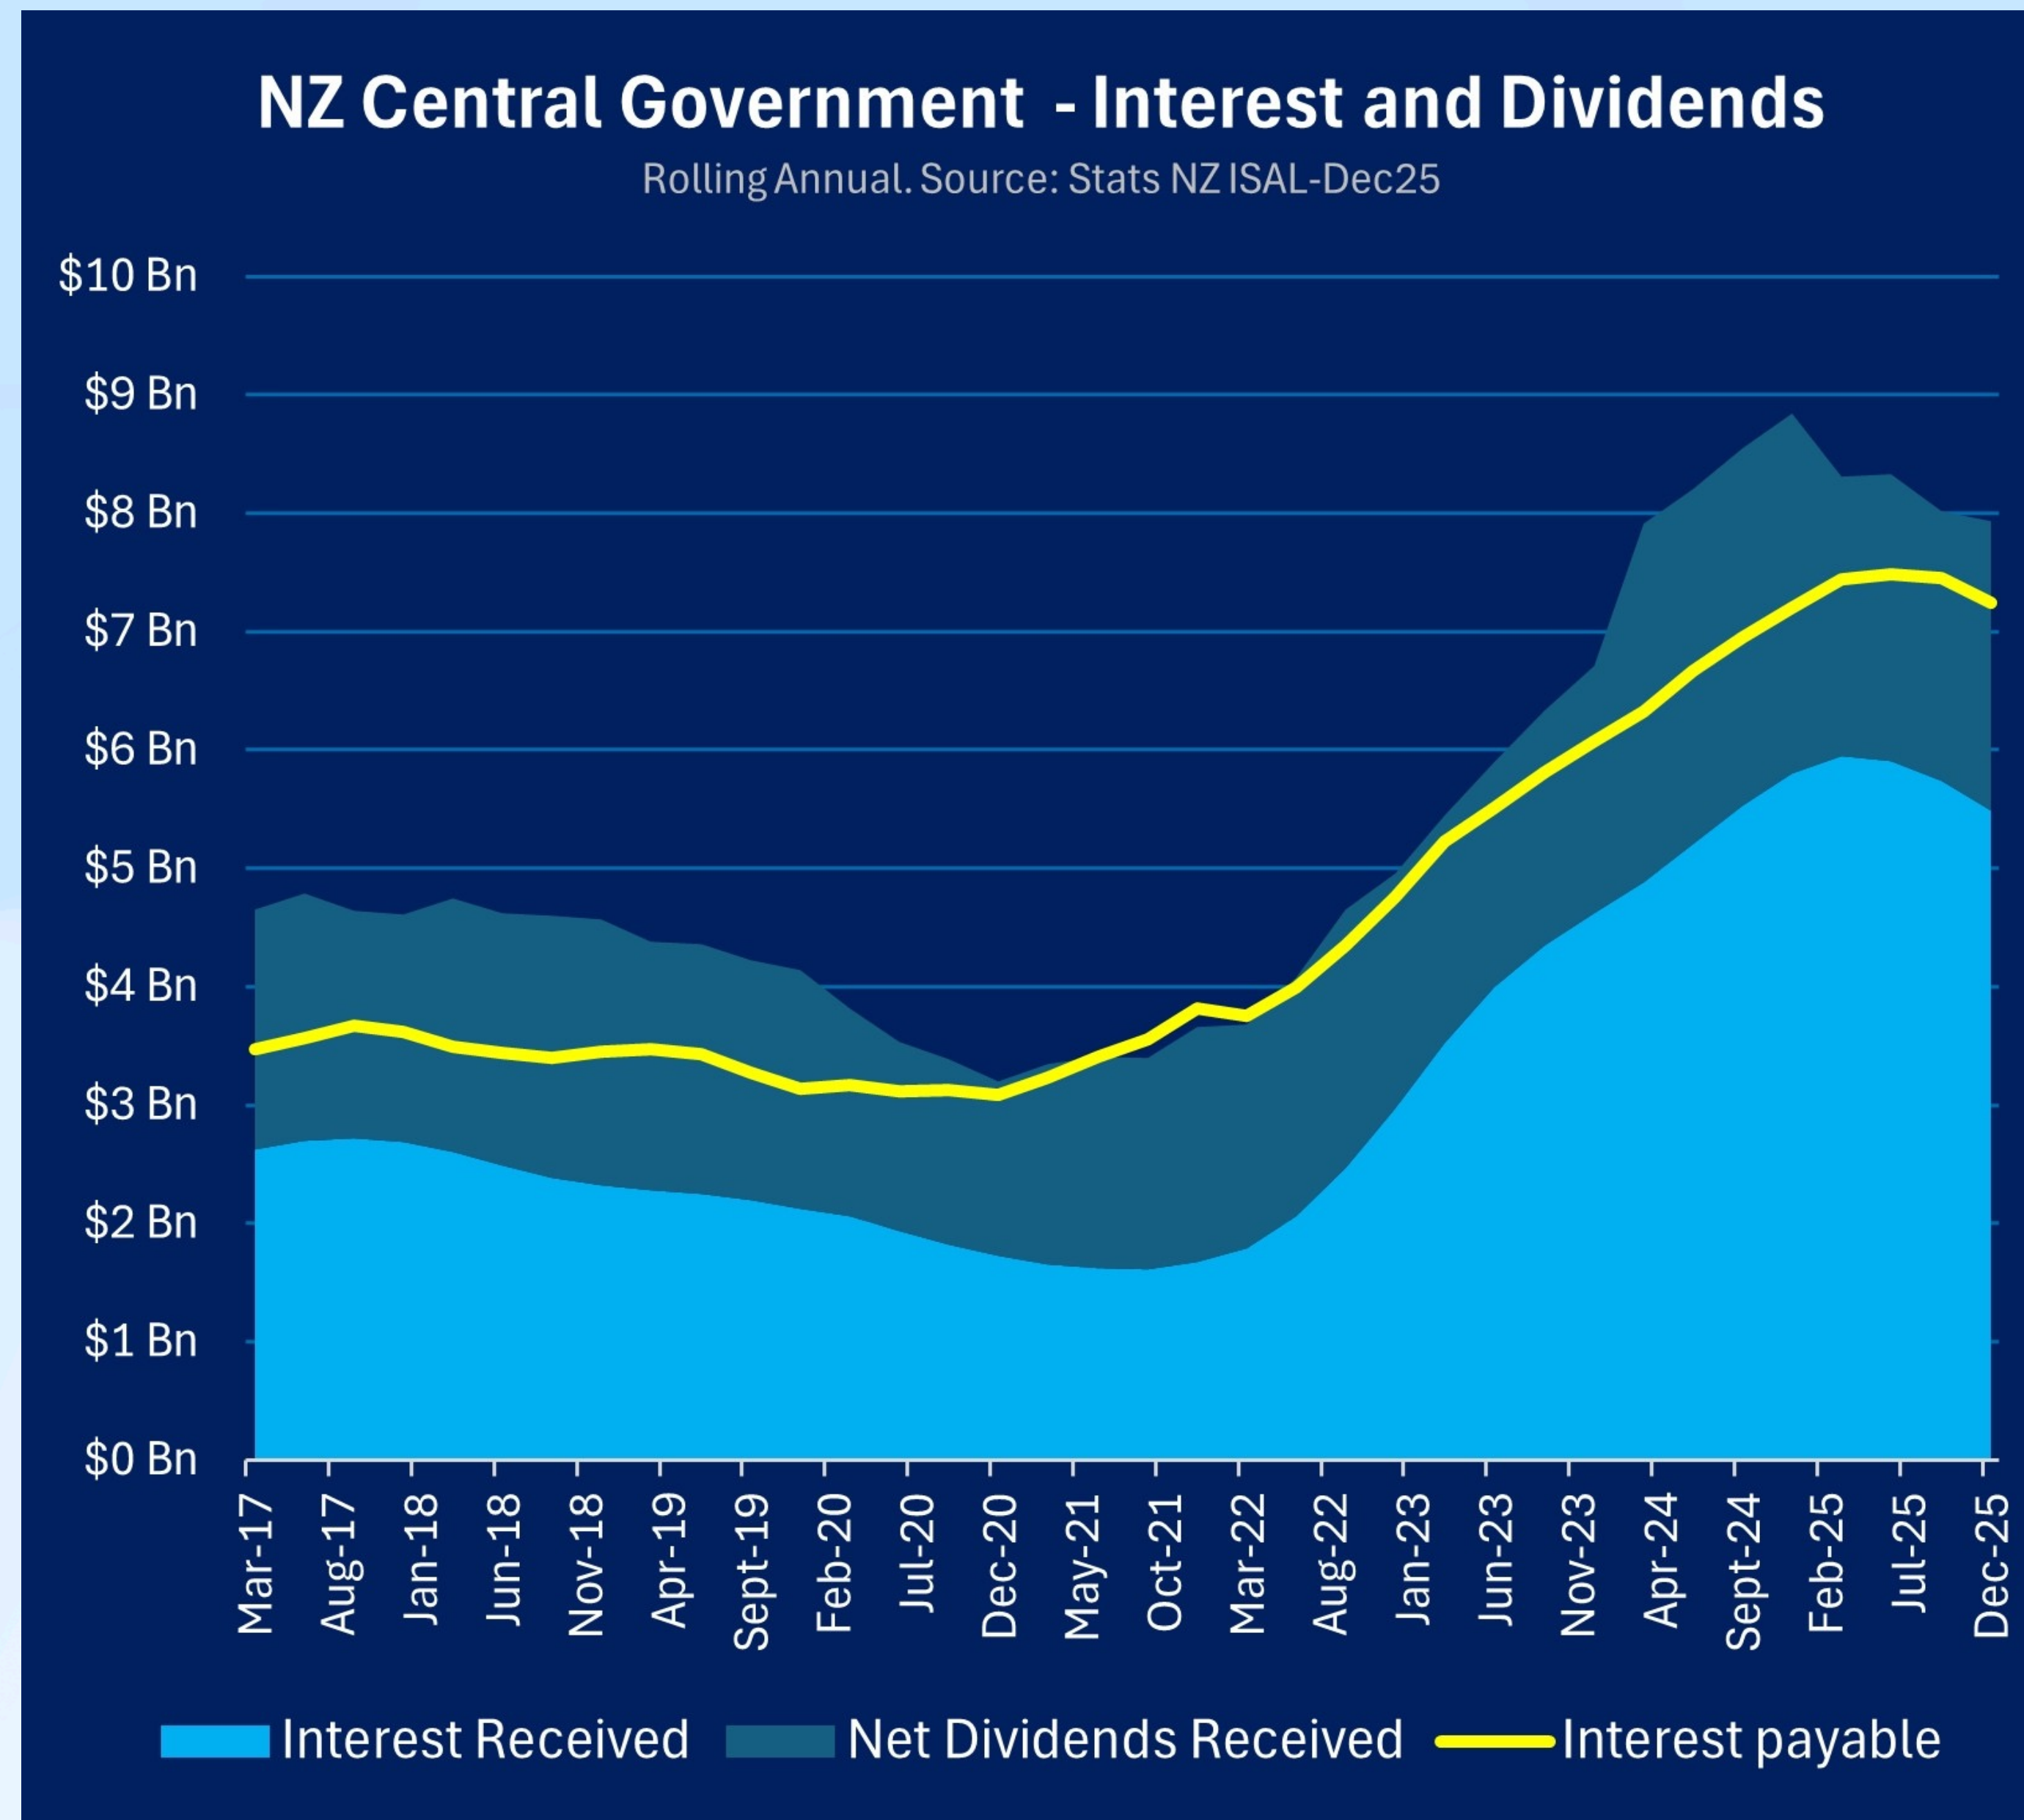

Our non-banks (landlord firms) most indebted in the world.

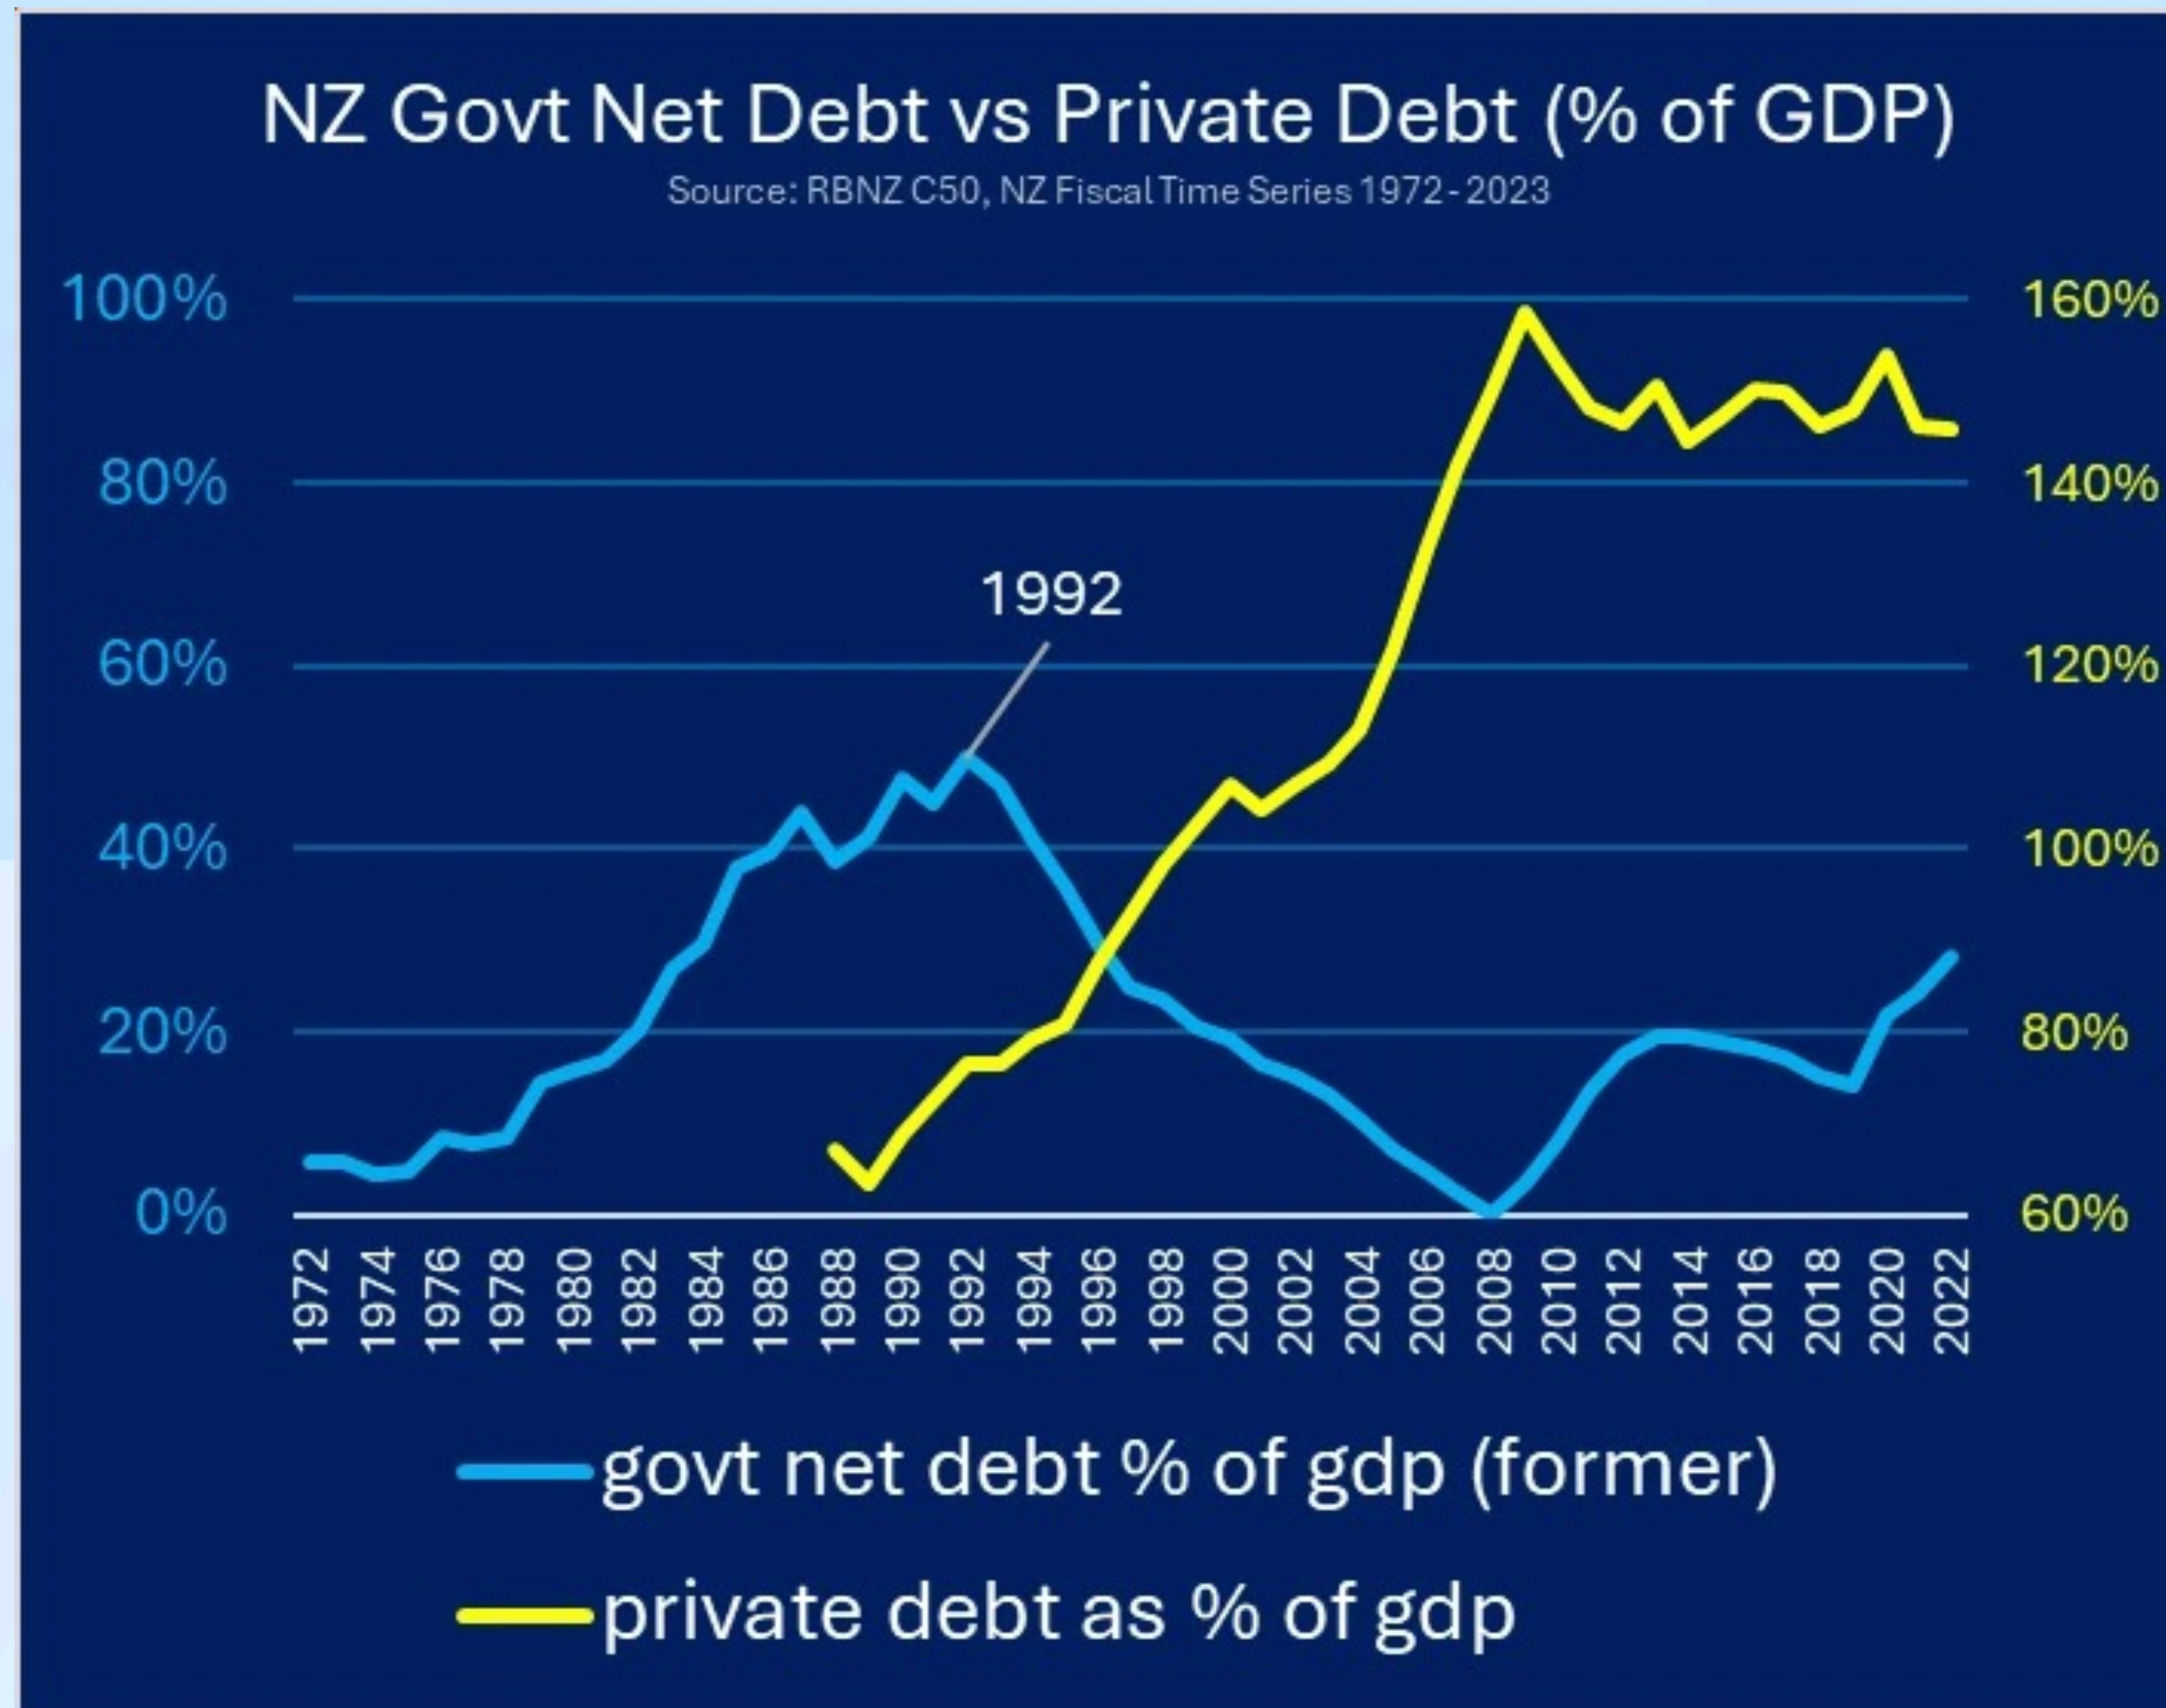

But what about the Government? No.

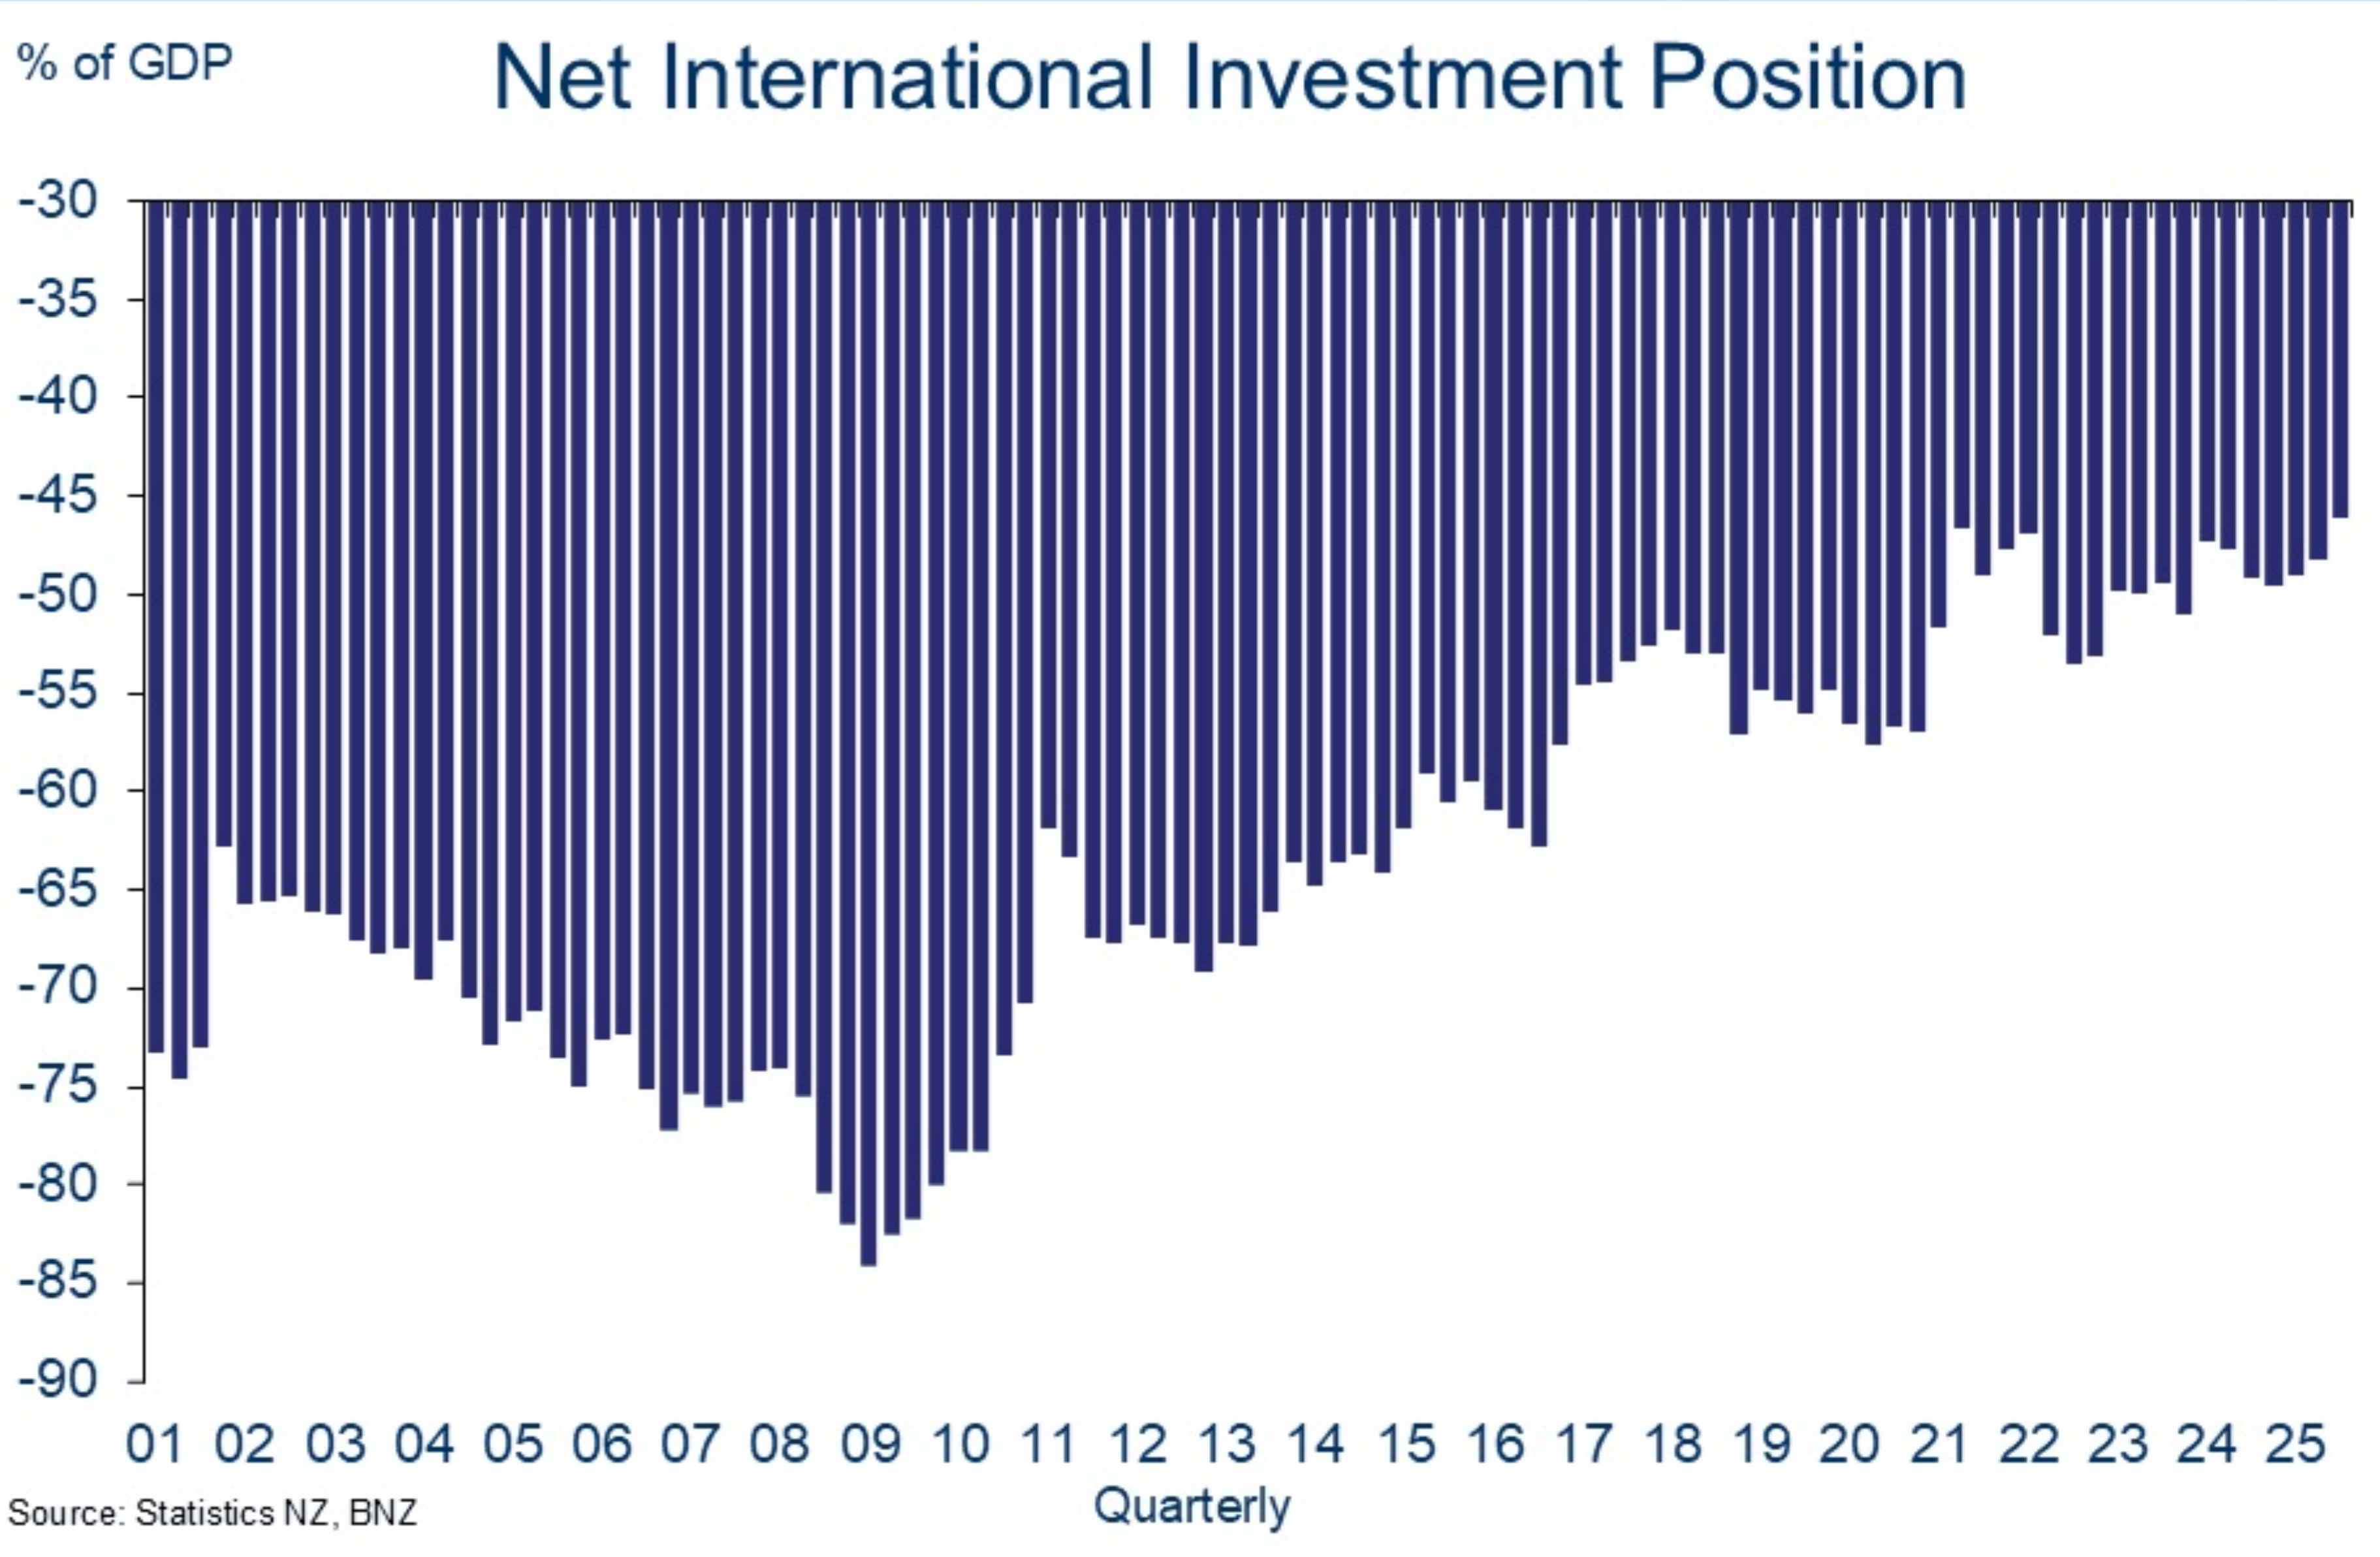

But I hear we're at risk of being locked out. No.

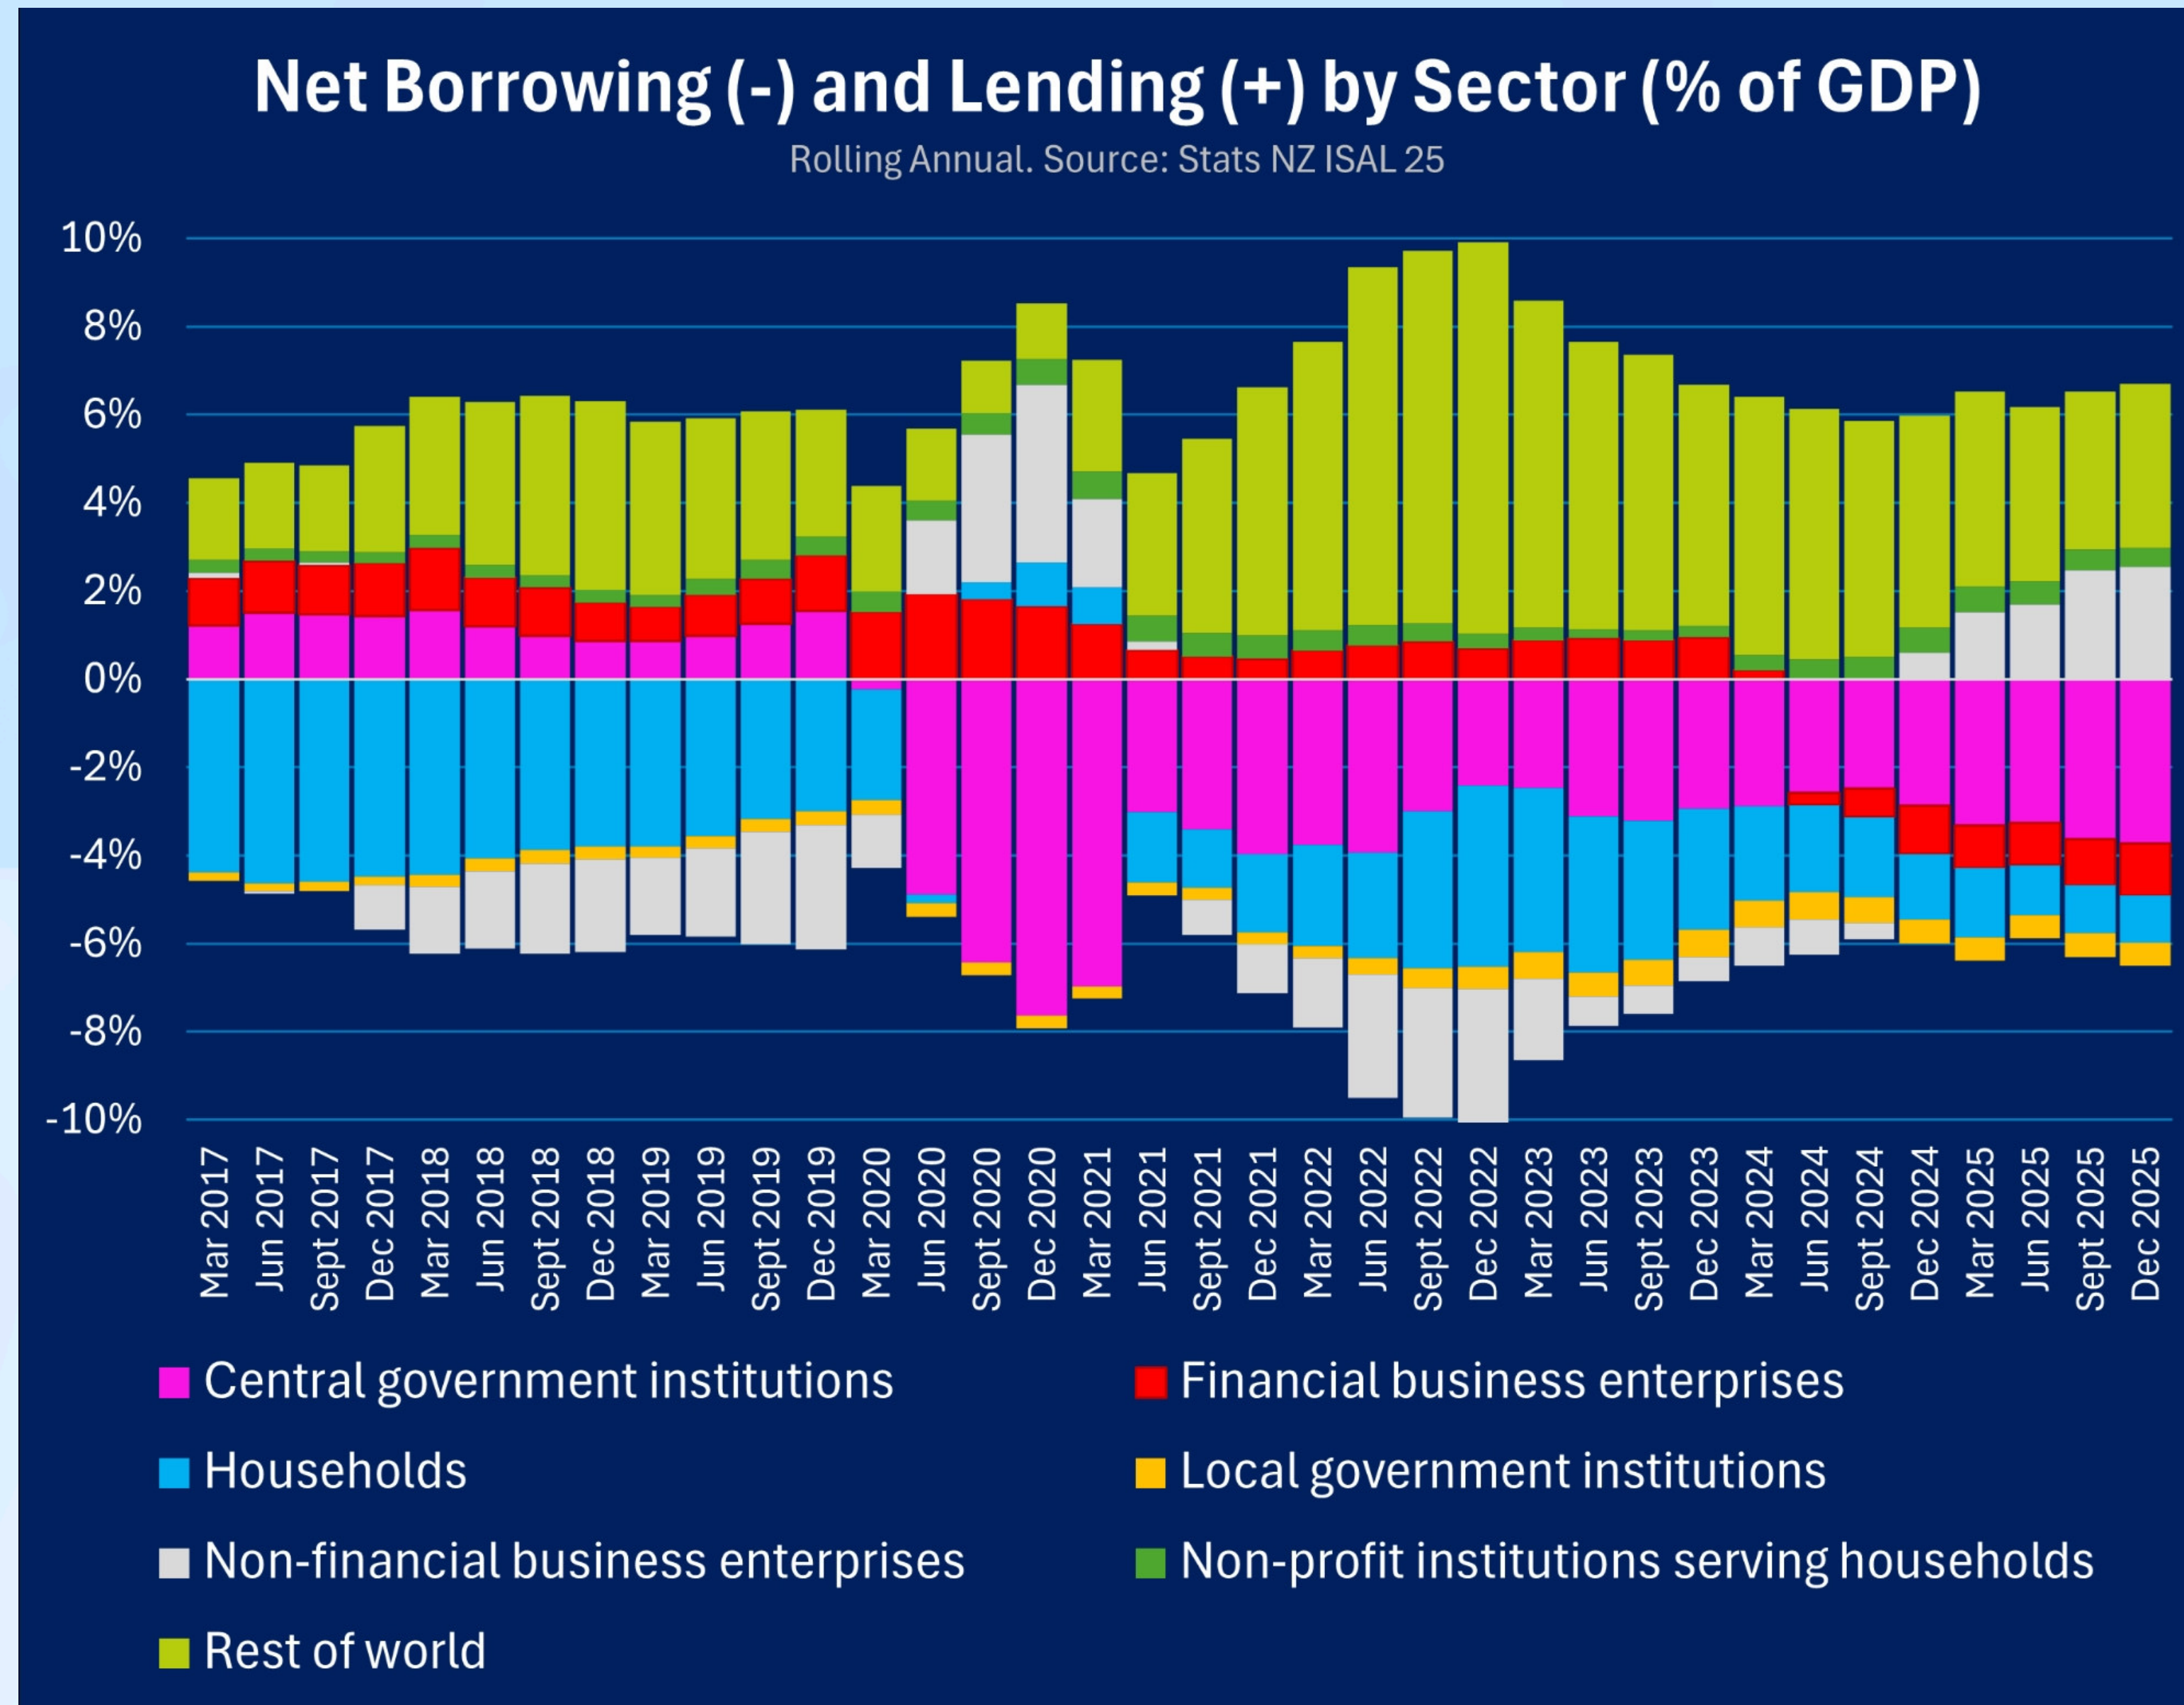

So why is 30% so important. No good reason.

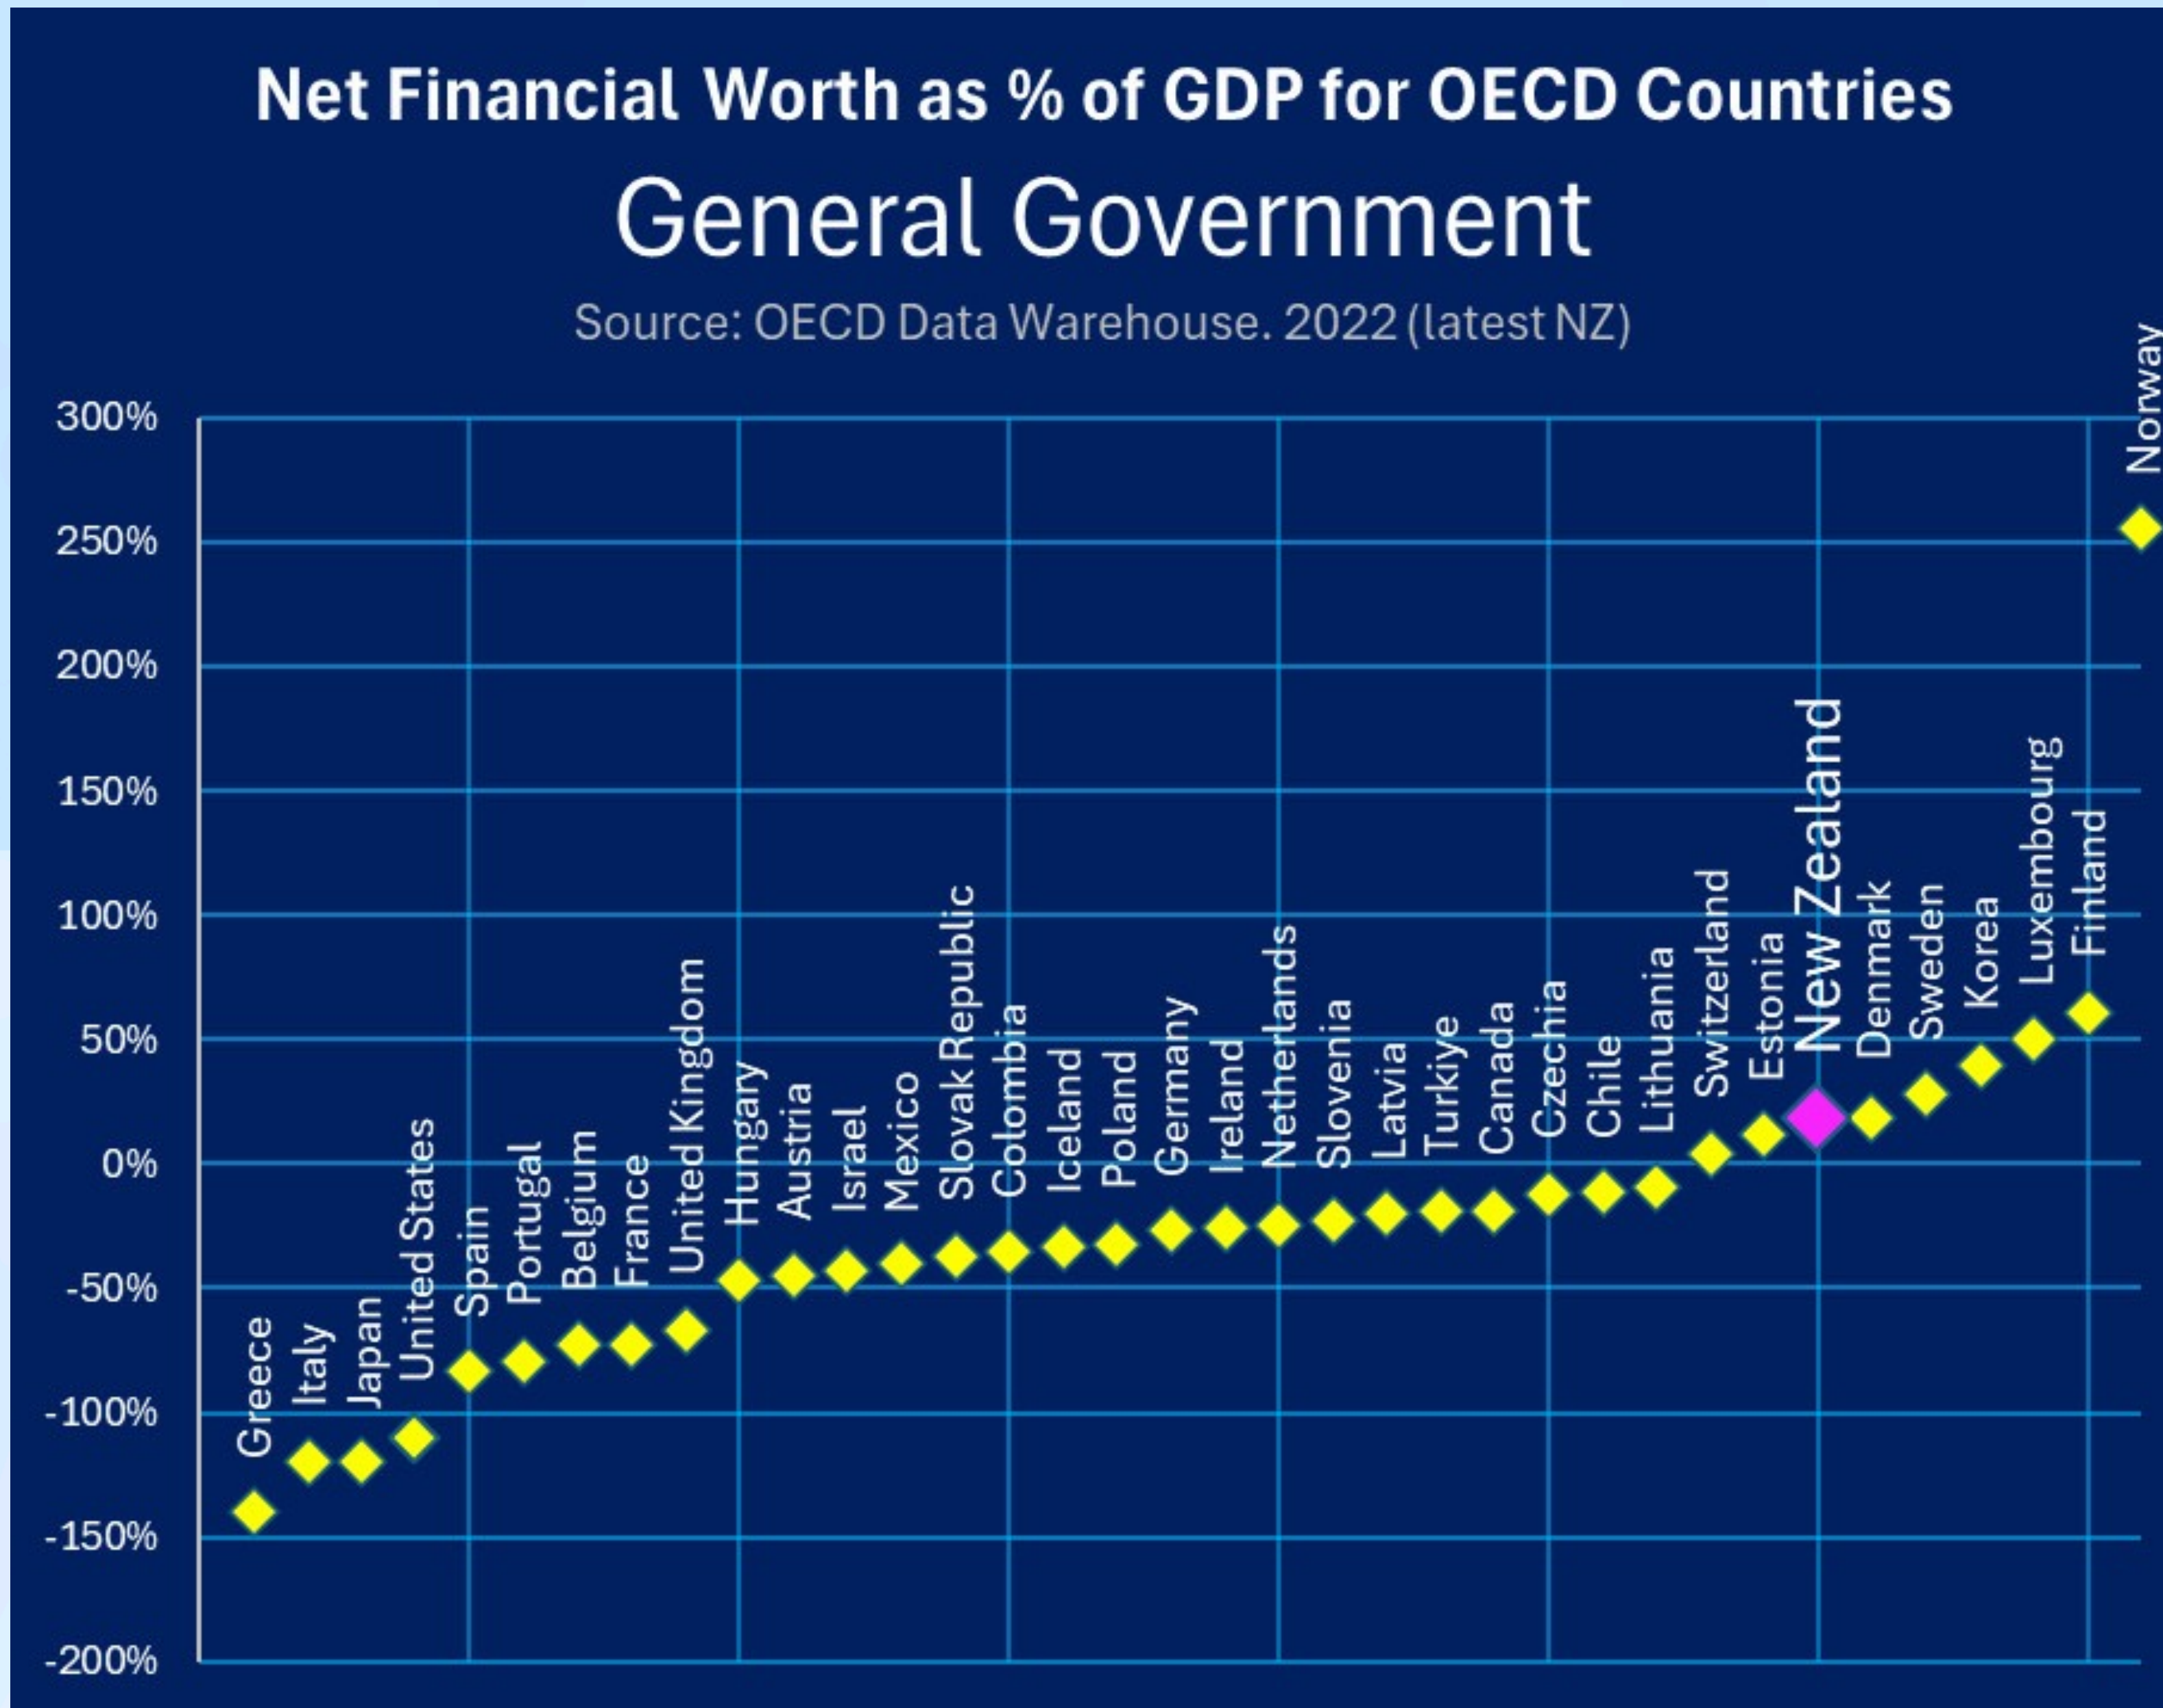

NZ less indebted to Rest of World than in 2000s

How the economy actually works

What about us vs the Rest of the World?

Even just Debt/GDP not that high.

....and is expected to remain low compared to other advanced economies.

Net Public Debt

(Percent of GDP)
